CLIMAXES OBSERVANCE

Legion Opens Day's Activities With Memorial Rites at Doughboy Monument.

Mansfield veterans of the World war will commemorate the signing of the Armistice, 19 years ago by "swinging down the avenue" in comaradiere tomorrow night with the men who were their enemies less than two decades ago.

In the Armistice parade there will be two contingents of World war veterans—the American men who fought on the side of the allies and the veterans of the Central Powers—keeping step to the same music, marching behind the same flags.

Services In Park.

The parade will be the climax of the day's activities, which will start in the morning when Legionnaires and members of their auxiliary hold their annual memorial services at the Doughboy monument in Central park. The services will be held at 11 a. m. A firing squad will fire a salute to the soldier dead of the World war and taps will be sounded.

The city will officially observe Armistice day, a national holiday, with the closing of the city building and the courthouse. The four Mansfield banks and the two state liquor stores also will suspend activities throughout the day.

The city schools will not be closed but will present special Armistice programs.

During the morning, L. A. Cook, commander of Earle D. McVey post of the American Legion, will address students at Senior high school on the subject of "Honorable Peace."

Open house will be observed at the Legion home throughout the day and at 6 p. m. Legionnaires will be hosts at a dinner for men of the G A R and veterans of the Spanish-American war.

The parade will form at 7 p. m. in front of the Legion home and out Park avenue west to Sturges and Bowman The column moves at 7:30, marching east on Park avenue to Central park, around the park and down Main street to Fourth, west on Fourth to Mulberry, south on Mulberry to Park avenue west and back to the Legion home where it will disband.

A brief stop will be made when

Man Who Slashed Wife 13 Times Gets Pen Term

A plea of guilty to a charge of slashing his estranged wife with a paring knife at Shelby last Sept. 26 today brought a one to 20 year sentence in the Ohio penitentiary to James LaBarge, 53, Shelby laundryman.

Sentence was passed by Common Pleas Judge C H. Huston after Atty. George Blecker, counsel for LaBarge, pleaded for leniency for LaBarge, who, Blecker said, had a good record in the Shelby community. A number of letters of recommendation for LaBarge were read by Blecker.

LaBarge, who was indicted by the grand jury for cutting with intend to wound, admitted inflicting 13 knife wounds on his wife, Bessie, following a quarrel at the home of her father, James Bond, in Shelby. Mrs. LaBarge, the defendant's third wife, recovered and brought suit for divorce, charging extreme cruelty.

Following the stabbing, LaBarge slashed his throat with a razor in an attempt on his own life. He recovered after several weeks in the Shelby hospital.

In passing sentence, Judge Huston said he would do nothing to stand in the way of a parole for LaBarge at the end of the first year of sentence, but added that in cases of attempts on the lives of persons, he could not place the defendant on probation.

"I hate to do this," Judge Huston said, "but I cannot take the responsibility of releasing you (LaBarge) on society."

Hamilton Flies to Mother's Bedside After Toledo G. O. P. Confab.

TOLEDO —(AP)— National Republican Chairman John D. M. Hamilton, who conferred with Michigan and Ohio party leaders here yesterday, was speeding by plane today to the bedside of his mother, seriously ill in Los Angeles.

Hamilton said the meeting, closed to newspaper men, was one of a series of conferences being conducted throughout the country to stimulate Republican activity.

Scot Leader Dies

JAMES RAMSAY MacDONALD

BRITAIN MOURNS STORMY LEADER

MacDonald, Dead Aboard Ship, Called 'Savior' by Friends, 'Traitor' By Foes.

LONDON—(AP)—The death of James Ramsay MacDonald, the son of a poor Scottish farmer who lived to decline an earldom, divided Britain today in appraisal of his life.

Against those who lauded the three-time prime minister as savior of the nation in the dark days of 1931, there were others who regarded him as a traitor to the labor party he built.

The 71-year-old Scotsman, Britain's first labor prime minister and the first prime minister to visit the United States, died last night aboard a South America-bound ship on a quest for the peace and happiness he had failed to find in his unique, stormy political career

He had sailed last Thursday in search of what he called "the most elusive of all forms of happiness—rest."

Death apparently was due to a heart attack following a long period of poor health. His daughter, Sheila, his sole companion on the voyage, messaged that the body would be taken off the ship, Reina Del Pacifico, at Bermuda

Duffy Asks Judge to Call Jury For Parole System Quiz.

COLUMBUS —(AP)— Atty. Gen. Herbert S. Duffy asked presiding Common Pleas Judge Dana Reynolds today to convene a special Franklin county grand jury Nov 22 to supplement his three months' old investigation of Ohio's probation and parole system.

"The purpose is to make available evidence which we have been unable to procure," Duffy said, adding that grand juries also would be sought later in Union, Madison, Richland, Lucas, Cuyahoga, Summit, Stark, and Mahoning counties and possibly Allen county.

Duffy said much of the work of the Franklin county body would be conducted at Ohio penitentiary and in his office.

Duffy was ordered by Gov. Martin L Davey to make the inquiry following published charges concerning activities of parole "brokers."

HAND CHOPPED OFF IN FIGHT, INTRUDER DIES

Assailant Battles on With Knife as Blood Gushes from Handless Arm.

BULLET ENDS SCUFFLE

Near Death Californian, 79, Grabs Gun Through Ruse And Kills Thief.

SANTA ROSA, Cal.—(AP)—A story of a gruesome, deadly duel between a 79-year-old rancher armed with an old, rusty sword and an intruder, brandishing a butcher knife, was pieced together by officers today from the dying survivor's gasps.

Thomas Elliott, the rancher, cut off the intruder's left hand, but finally was overpowered. Surrendering, he promised to get his money.

Instead, he grabbed a gun and killed the invader with one shot.

Elliott was so critically wounded hospital attendants gave him little chance to survive.

Reconstructs Battle Scene.

Sheriff Harry Patteson reconstructed this story of the grotesque battle:

Answering a knock at the door of the house where he lives alone, Elliott was confronted late last night by a hooded intruder, holding a flashlight in one hand and a butcher knife in the other.

"This is a robbery," the hooded man said. "I want your money!"

Elliott fled upstairs, grabbed the old sword from its scabbard on the wall and wheeled to battle his assailant. They duelled about the room and battled down the stairs.

A sudden swipe of Elliott's sword cut off the stranger's left hand. The stranger stooped, picked up the hand, stuffed it into his pocket.

Then, despite loss of his hand, the intruder suddenly overpowered the elderly rancher, threw him to the floor and waved his butcher knife menacingly.

Surrenders, Gets Gun.

"I surrender! I'll get the money!" the rancher shouted. The man let Elliott up and attempted to stem the flow of blood from his arm.

Elliott stumbled toward a cupboard. But instead of cash, he grabbed a gun, turned and fired. The invader dropped dead.

Elliott staggered a quarter of a mile to the home of his nearest neighbors, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Schilling.

The sheriff found the stranger's body in the wildly disordered room.

The hood over his head was a barley sack with slits for the eyes.

Louisville Papers Increase Street Sale Prices As Costs Go Up.

LOUISVILLE, Ky.—(AP)— The Louisville Courier-Journal and Times announced today that effective Nov. 15 street sales and dealer prices would be boosted from 3 to 5 cents a copy. Advances in the price of white paper and increased production costs were cited. Canadian paper mills, which supply most of the newsprint used in America, have announced increases in white paper costs of about 15 per cent, effective Jan. 1.

83 World War Veterans Daily Join Unknown Soldier In Death

By EDDY GILMORE

WASHINGTON—(AP)— Between tonight's civilian sunset and tomorrow's military taps 83 Americans now living will join an old comrade in death.

They are veterans of the World war who 19 years ago on Nov. 11 laid down their arms in armistice and who now, the veterans' administration said, are dying at that daily rate.

Their comrade is that mute sentinel of the warrior dead—America's Unknown Soldier.

Many of the survivors are well and happy: but:

Fifty-two thousand are in hospitals and institutions . . . six times that number are without regular jobs . . . some have no eyesight . . . others are maimed of limb and mind.

The veterans' administration has expended $22,236,749,241 . . . adjusted service certificates have gone out to 3,468,967 veterans . . . about $1,400,000,000 of the bonds have been turned into cash.

The treasury, on the eve of Armistice day, checked back over the yellowing ledgers and estimated that the World war has cost the United States—

$46,193,000,000!

Destiny in 19 years has kicked the scene upside down.

The war president, Woodrow Wilson, is long dead.

The wartime assistant secretary of the navy—Franklin D. Roosevelt—will go to the sloping hills of Arlington cemetery tomorrow to lay a wreath on the Unknown Soldier's tomb.

Sweetheart of Sigma Chi

Here's the "Sweetheart of Sigma Chi." At least, she is the sweetheart of Sigma Chi fraternity at the University of Tennessee, Knoxville. Selected for her personality, Miss Martha Webb of Knoxville is seated atop an old-fashioned wood-burning fire engine, brought to the campus for a decoration in the annual college fraternity beauty derby.

Two Give Blood In Effort To Save Injured Student

Mansfield Pastor's Son and Fraternity Brother Are Donors—Youth's Condition Critical.

Two blood transfusions were given yesterday to Michael Ondov, 24, Wittenberg college senior, who is in Mansfield General hospital, critically injured in an automobile accident last Friday, in an effort to save his life, but his condition this morning remained critical, according to hospital attendants.

Donors of the blood were Grover Swoyer, senior high school student, and son of Rev. Grover E. Swoyer, pastor of the First Lutheran church, and a Wittenberg college student.

The name of the Wittenberg student was not learned at the hospital, but he is believed to be one of the 15 Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity members who drove to Mansfield Monday night to offer their blood for transfusion. Only one of the 15 had blood that "typed" with that of Ondov, a member of Pi Kappa Alpha.

Rallies Slightly.

Hospital attendants reported that Ondov rallied slightly after the transfusions, but that his condition was still critical. One transfusion was given yesterday afternoon, and another last night.

Ondov suffered a fractured back when the car in which he and six other Wittenberg students, all going to their homes in Youngstown and Cleveland, overturned near Hayesville Miss Helen Trezlow, of Bedford, another student injured in the accident, was released from the hospital Sunday.

CAMPUS BUZZING

Michigan to Probe Alleged Subsidized Grid Players.

ANN ARBOR, Mich —(AP)— Official notice of rumors that subsidized athletes have been brought to University of Michigan in the last two years caused widespread campus comment today.

Prof. Ralph W Aigler, chairman of the board of control in charge of physical education at the university, announced that an investigation was under way.

Harry Kipke, football coach, said that as far as he knew the rumors were without foundation

Campus gossip was that Chicago and Cleveland Alumni had subsidized football players in an attempt to restore Michigan to its former eminence in collegiate football. It was contended the current freshman football team possessed backfield material superior to the varsity.

The local R. E. A has 750 signers and proposes to build 220 miles of lines if the government approves the $200,000 project.

THROAT SLASHED

Man Clutching Razor Blades Found Dead In Box Car.

TOLEDO—(UP)—A man tentatively identified as Edward Weckstrom, 50, of Hamilton, O., was found dead from a slashed throat in a box car in the Michigan Central railroad yards today.

Coroner William E. Shapiro pronounced the man a suicide when detectives of the homicide squad found four blood stained razor blades clutched in the dead man's hand.

ALL'S WELL IN BELLVILLE, NEW SPAN ASSURED

Contract Finally Let for Bridge Over Clear Fork, Sought By Village for Years.

WORK STARTS IN MONTH

State Awards Route 13 Job To Mansfield Firm on Low Bid of $47,000.

Bellville was happy today in the realization that a three-year fight for a new bridge over Clear Fork creek had brought results

That actual construction of the new structure would begin possibly within a month was assured by Boyd W. Wierman, resident engineer of the state highway department, after the Purdy Construction company of Mansfield was awarded the contract yesterday on its low bid of $47,098.

Needs Federal O. K.

Wierman explained that contract still needs the approval of the federal government before it becomes official but said he expects it will be received in the next to days.

The Purdy bid was $4,000 under the estimated cost of $51,405. The estimate was boosted by $6,700 over the former figure which failed to attract bidders several weeks ago

Bellville's campaign for the bridge to replace a hazardous structure on route 13 just north of the village has been headed by the council and chamber of commerce, but nearly every one in the village has done his bit of boosting for the cause.

Send Flood Of Requests.

Three years ago a committee visited the Richland county commissioners to start the drive. Then requests began to flood the state highway department through the county and district offices.

"All through the drive we have literally beaten a path to Columbus to request action from the state highway officials," Mayor Edgar Stahl said today. He added that "the new bridge will mean a lot to Bellville from a business standpoint, since much of the heavy truck traffic north and south has been following route 42 through Mt. Gilead to avoid the narrow, dangerous bridge at Bellville."

The new bridge will have a span of 143 feet with a 40-foot concrete approach on each side. The contract also calls for a change in the channel of Clear Fork near the bridge to aid in reducing flood danger. The bridge, Wierman said, will have a concrete floor and a steel structure several feet high on each side of the traffic lane.

'SUMMER' BACK

Mercury Hits 60, But Rain and Cold Are on Way.

Summer, the Indian variety, was back in Mansfield today.

The sun was bright, the breeze was almost balmy, and the mercury at noon stood at 60, according to Observer Otto Sprunger.

But there wasn't much in the forecast to indicate that Indian summer would stay very long—in fact, it'll probably be gone by tonight. Tonight's due to be cloudy and rainy, said the weatherman, and tomorrow will be rainy and colder.

'Twas a bit cool last night, when a reading of 33 was recorded. Yesterday's high was 57, though, and the average was a bit above normal.

Kisses, Slain

Taunted by his wife when he assertedly found her kissing his "best friend," Paul A. Wright, 38, president of the Union Air Terminal at Glendale, Cal., shot and killed his wife, Mrs Evelyn Wright, formerly of Detroit, and fatally wounded the friend, John B. Kimmel, 36, airport traffic manager.

WIFE-KILLER WAITS INQUEST

Air Terminal President Held For Suspicion of Murder in Deaths of Mate, Friend.

GLENDALE, Calif. —(AP)— Paul Wright, president of Union Air terminal, was held on suspicion of murder today pending a coroner's inquest Friday into the fatal shooting of his wife and "my best friend"

Wright summoned police to his fashionable home early yesterday and showed them Mrs. Evelyn Wright and John B Kimmel, operations manager of the airport, both dying He said he shot them when he found them embracing.

Chief V. B. Browne said Wright had made a written confession that related:

"My wife looked up at me and smiled or sort of laughed, and then kissed Johnny on the lips. Everything went white hot I got my automatic pistol. I don't know how many times I fired I just recall pulling the trigger. I walked out into the night air; didn't even look back at them, and called the police.

"I guess this is just one of those things that happens to men who break I never had suspected Evelyn and Kimmel. He was a perfect gentleman, one of my best friends.

"I had suspected Evelyn of stepping out with other men because of little things she said, and did.

"We were not too happy . . . but . . . I shouldn't say these things about her She tried hard to be a good wife. Let me say that, instead."

Roll Call Dinner Tonight To Open Annual Red Cross Drive

More than 300 volunteer workers for the Richland County chapter of the Red Cross will gather in the Westinghouse cafeteria at 6 p. m. today for the annual Roll Call dinner which precedes the formal opening of the membership drive on Armistice day.

Speakers will be Judge Henry Robinson of Columbus, Roll Call chairman of Ohio, and Everett Dix, assistant director of the Eastern area of the American Red Cross. W. L. Miller superintendent of schools, will preside.

The program, which includes several novel and interesting features has been planned by W. J. Locke, general Roll Call chairman of the chapter; Roy R. Spetka, chapter chairman, and Gertrude B. English, executive secretary. Arrangements for the dinner are in charge of Mrs. V. E. Vining. The Junior Red Cross made the favors and place cards for the dinner.

Locke will give workers their supplies for the drive after the program.

Climbs on Porch Roof, Carries Children to Safety While Flames Roar in Home.

CINCINNATI — (UP) — Mrs. Eva Telgheder, 73, a widow, was suffocated and four men were injured when a two-story frame dwelling burned here today.

Those injured were:

Elmer Yeager, 24, a boarder, in serious condition with burns on the face, head and back and cuts on the arm and head.

Capt. Lambert Coheran of fire company 12, burned on the hands.

Fireman Rudolph Gump, overcome by smoke.

Falls From Porch.

Edward Lampert, 23, burned on the wrists. He also suffered a back injury when he fell from a porch roof.

Roy Telgheder, 15, grandson of Mrs. Telgheder, was awakened by smoke in a second story room with his uncle, Elmer Yeager, and brother, Elmer, 11. He screamed, arousing his parents who were in another room with their youngest child, Janet Mae, 5.

Lampert helped to remove four persons from the burning house before he was hurt.

Rushes to Blaze.

Lampert, who resides a block away, was aroused when he saw the flames. He went to the fire and saw Ruth Telgheder, 14, and her grandmother leaning from a window of the smoke filled house, screaming. He climbed to the porch roof.

He took Ruth and her sister, Janet Mae, from the window and lowered them to those on the ground. Then he went to a rear room and rescued Elmer Telgheder, 11. He carried Mrs. Mildred Telgheder, 34, invalid mother of the children, from the front room.

Lampert lost his week's pay when he pulled a handkerchief from his pocket to put over Mrs. Telgheder's mouth to protect her from the smoke.

MINE ABLAZE

Flames Sweep Coal Tunnel Under Scranton, Pa.

SCRANTON, Pa.—(AP)—A mine fire swept on unchecked today 250 feet beneath a section of the city where live 10,000 of Scranton's inhabitants.

Engineers were helpless. They lacked equipment necessary to approach the white-hot mass of coals, fired by a broken trolley wire two weeks ago in the Von Storch mine of the Penn Anthracite Collieries company.

Mine inspectors said there was no danger at present to those dwelling over the fire area in North Scranton.

They added, however, that deadly carbon monoxide gas—odorless and colorless—might seep through surface breaks.

NOMINATED TO COMMAND NAVY

Admiral Bloch Drew Pictures of Ships At Sea When a Boy.

LOUISVILLE, Ky.—(AP)—An inland state lad who got his best grades in school for his pictures of ships at sea and later churned butter with a latin book propped beside him will be the next commander-in-chief of the United States navy.

That lad, now Admiral Claude Charles Bloch, was nominated last night by Secretary Swanson to succeed, about Feb. 1, Admiral Arthur J. Hepburn as navy commander.

The son of a Czechoslovakian immigrant and a native of Woodbury, Ky., a state that has given the navy several of its high ranking officers, Bloch, now 59, is a veteran of the Spanish-American and World wars.

Brunet Says Sheriff Had Blackjack at Fatal Party

SAW OFFICER WITH WEAPON, SHE TESTIFIES

Pomeroy Woman Declares She 'Traded' Sheriff Dance for Alleged Death Instrument.

POMEROY—(AP)—Spread upon the record in common pleas court today was the testimony of vivacious brunet Lydia Davis that she took a blackjack to Sheriff Roscoe O. Fowler during a party that preceded the death of Lafe Williamson, Meigs county Republican leader. Fowler is on trial charged with second degree murder.

Miss Davis, one of eight witnesses who took the stand for the state yesterday, said she "traded" the sheriff a dance for the blackjack at a lodge party and that she obtained it from John Circle, a member of the party at her table.

Holds Assault Intentional.

The state charges that Fowler assaulted Williamson with a blackjack during the course of the party and that he "purposely and maliciously killed" him.

"How did you know it was the sheriff's blackjack?" defense counsel Joseph Hogan of Columbus asked Miss Davis under cross examination.

"Just a woman's intuition," she replied.

"And what was that intuition?"

"I knew the sheriff was there and that, being the sheriff, the blackjack was probably his."

"Didn't you want to return the blackjack to the sheriff because you thought Lafe Williamson was on the way to your table to ask you for a dance?" Hogan asked.

"No," replied Miss Davis.

Found At Curb.

Other witnesses told of seeing Williamson after he had left the club on the early Sunday morning of June 27 and before he was found lying unconscious across the curb, a few blocks away. The political leader died almost three weeks later, was buried and exhumed by special investigators who discovered a skull fracture.

In his opening statement, Manning Webster, youthful county prosecutor, told the jury of nine men and thre women that before Williamson died, he regained consciousness and named the man who "got" him.

"That man is Roscoe O. Fowler," he declared.

Assassin of U. S. Consul Croons on March to Gallows

BEIRUT, Lebanon — (AP) — Crooning a song in Turkish, Meguerdich Karayan, 29-year-old assassin of United States Consul General James Theodore Marriner, went to his death on the gallows at dawn today.

The significance of the song went unexplained but the words were: "I have waited for thee but thou hath not come."

Karayan, an Armenian who had lived in Boston as a naturalized American, was hurried to the gallows after a night of calm sleep. In his last words he told witnesses of the execution that an "insult motivated my crime."

He ended his last speech with: "Down with Washington!"

Karayan, angered because he had not received permission from Marriner to re-enter the United States, emptied a revolver at the American diplomat Oct. 12 as he stepped from his automobile in front of the United States consulate.

(Karayon told police he had felt "insulted" because he had not received the re-entry permit. Actually, it dveloped, Marriner had granted the visa but the letter informing the Armenian had not been delivered because Karayan had changed his address.)

Apostolic Christian Home to be Viewed by Public Tomorrow.

A new home for aged women, established one and a half miles east of Mansfield by the Apostolic Christian church will be open for public inspection from 10 a. m. to 10 p. m. Thursday, Henry Sabo, superintendent, announced today.

Purchased last April from Elmer Young, the dwelling located on the former Charles List farm on the Wooster road, was completely remodeled and will accommodate at least 12 persons, Sabo said. The home will receive inmates from this section of the state, several of whom are expected to arrive within the next week.

Trustees of the home are Lucas Sabo, Joe Beer and John Fuhrer.

Up and Down THE STREET

The library at Bowman street school could stand a little "stocking up" and faculty members there are wondering if there are any Mansfielders who have children's books and magazines they'd like to give the school. They'll appreciate, also, such magazines as Popular Mechanics, and National Geographic, in addition to reading material prepared especially for children. If you've got any of the things they need, the school will arrange to come for them, if you'll telephone.

Mansfield nimrods, while grateful for this elegant weather, are secretly hoping for a touch of snow before Monday. The bunnies leave their footprints in the snow and are much easier to see when there is a white background. Advance reports are that there are fewer pheasants and rabbits this year than for a number of years, and those who know about such things say it is due to the unusually wet spring.

Mansfield business and professional men are going in for brighter colors in their suits, with bright purple and rust predominating. But, we hasten to add, they are gym suits. The noon volley ball games at the Y. M. C. A. gym attracts business men, attorneys, doctors and ministers, all intent on keeping fit, and recently they ordered new gym trunks. They came today and were in colors that rivals those to be found in an autumn garden. The players will wear white shirts with them.

ILLNESS FATAL

Mrs. L. A. Morton, 50, Was Lifelong Crestline Resident.

CRESTLINE—Mrs. Lucretia A. Morton, 50, lifelong resident of Crestline, died Tuesday evening at her home, following an illness of eight months.

Mrs. Morton was born June 29, 1887 in Crestline and spent her entire life here. She was a member of the Daughters of America, and the First Presbyterian church.

Surviving are her mother, Mrs. Electa Frownfelter of Crestline, four children, Ivan L. Morton of Mansfield, Mrs. Ida Mae Fisher of Crestline, and Richard L. and Grace M. at home; a sister, Mrs. Ben Fisher of Crestline, and two grandchildren.

The body was removed to the Fred E. Stick funeral home where private funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. Thursday, with Rev. T. M. Patterson, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, officiating. Burial will be in Greenlawn cemetery.

COMMONS OUSTS FIERY LABORITE

'Don't Give a Damn for the Lot of You,' He Shouts.

LONDON—(AP)—David Kirkwood, Laborite, was suspended today from the house of commons, by a vote of 178 to 104, after a stormy scene in which he shouted from the floor "I don't give a damn for the lot of you."

Kirkwood was asked to withdraw when he repeatedly interrupted other speakers to insist on an answer to his question about the effect of the cost of living on the unemployed.

He refused to retire, and Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain moved his suspension.

Walking toward the door, Kirkwood turned to shout: "You think you are going to treat me like a boy . . . well, I don't give a damn."

PEN INMATES COOPED UP LIKE RABBITS IN CAGE, WARDEN SAYS

COLUMBUS—(AP)—Human beings cooped up like rabbits in iron cages, 7 by 9½ feet . . . four men to a cage . . . . compelled thus to live 14 hours out of every 24 . . . . nerves often rasped jittery . . . . and not much to do about it.

Warden J. C. Woodard today painted this picture of Ohio penitentiary, built 103 years ago to house 2,500 men and now packed with more than 4,100 felons, white, black and yellow.

He agreed with Gov. Martin L. Davey who, in proposing the construction of a new penitentiary at London said:

"It is a crime to let our institutions go along the way they are now."

The warden added:

"They would arrest you for offering such lodging facilities outside these walls."

These overcrowded conditions make proper segregation of the habitual criminals, the first termers, the mentally defective and the sexual perverts impossible, the warden said.

Conditions were described as perhaps the most trying in the 7 by 9½-foot four-man cells, of which the penitentiary has 660. Sometimes the occupants are of different temperament. Little things are annoying, such as when one man wants the light on and the others want it off, when one man does not display the proper cleanliness and the others let the cell become dirty "rather than keep cleaning up one guy's dirt."

E. D. CARRIGAN DIES IN BUCYRUS

President of City Council and Former Mansfielder Under-Went Operation Monday.

Edward D. Carrigan, 60, a former Mansfield resident and president of the Bucyrus city council, died at 6:10 a. m. today in the Bucyrus City hospital following a major operation which he underwent Monday.

Born Oct. 3, 1877, at Ft. Wayne, Ind., Mr. Carrigan moved to Bucyrus from Mansfield 30 years ago. He had been president of the council there for the past four years, and would have ended his term Dec. 31. He was not a candidate in last week's election.

Mr Carrigan was active in Democratic politics and was manager of the state liquor store in Bucyrus for the past year. He was a former machinist in the New York Central railroad shops at Bucyrus.

Fraternally, Mr. Carrigan was a member of the Knights of Columbus for 35 years. He was a member of the Bucyrus K. of C. council, of which he was a past grand knight. At the time of his death he was a trustee of the lodge. Last July he retired as district deputy of the order. He was a charter member of Mansfield K. of C. council, No. 687.

Surviving are his wife, Helen, and a son, James, at home; two brothers, James F. Carrigan of Mansfield and Dr. R. E. Carrigan of Tiffin, and three sisters, Miss Helen Carrigan of Mansfield, Mrs A H. Sackstеder of Tiffin and Sister M Catherine of Chicago.

Funeral arrangements are incomplete.

TALK TO REVEAL POLICY TO STEM BUSINESS DROP

Program Expected to Be Aired When Treasury Head, Byrd Speak Tonight.

WASHINGTON—(U.P.)—The first authoritative intimation of President Roosevelt's spending plans to cope with the present business recession is expected tonight in an address by Secretary of Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr.

Morgenthau and Sen. Harry F. Byrd (D, Va.) will speak in New York before the Academy of Political Science. Their subject will be "government expenditure." Advance notice on Morgenthau's speech is that it will deal with future as well as past spending and the problem of balancing the budget.

Represent Both Sides.

These two men are fairly representative of the disputing elements now striving for control of the New Deal-Democratic party. Cleavage is most evident on questions of spending, taxation and federal incursions into fields of regulation and operation hitherto occupied by private industry.

S. Parker Gilbert, a J. P. Morgan and company partner, will preside at the academy dinner. Byrd will speak at 9 p. m. to be followed immediately by Morgenthau at 9:30 p. m. (EST). Both addresses will be broadcast.

Morgenthau's discussions of federal spending policies was anticipated today because it comes during a series of White House conferences at which Mr. Roosevelt is attempting to co-ordinate his hopes for balancing the budget with conditions which apparently demand acceleration of big scale spending.

The decision confronting Mr. Roosevelt is whether to adopt another big "pump priming" program of government expenditure or to attempt to maneuver business and finance into private spending operations which would quicken business activity.

Some of Mr. Roosevelt's usually influential advisers are urging the latter course. Notable among them are Chairman Jesse Jones of the Reconstruction Finance corporation and Marriner S. Eccles of the federal reserve board.

Morgenthau, himself is counted among the "economy minded" cabinet members.

HELD TO JURY

Mansfielder Pleads Guilty on Check Charge.

Maynard Clark, 28, of 49 West Second street pleaded guilty in municipal court today to a charge of uttering and publishing a check with intent to defraud. He was bound over to the grand jury under $1,500 bond.

Charges were filed by Kent E. Myers, manager of the Four Hour Laundry at 30 South Park street. In his affidavit, Myers claimed that he cashed a check for $13.48, tendered by Clark and drawn on the Richland Trust company, where he had no account.

POWERS AWAIT JAPAN'S REPLY

Conference Adjourns Until Saturday When Answer's Expected.

BRUSSELS —(AP)— The Brussels conference today adjourned until Saturday after Belgian Foreign Minister Paul Spaak announced that Japan's reply to the conference's peace note was expected by that time.

Spaak, chairman of the conference, said the latest information from the Belgian ambassador in Tokyo, Baron De Bassompierre, was that the reply would be decided upon at a meeting of the Japanese cabinet Friday.

He added that the text of the note probably would be communicated to the various delegations here Friday night.

DENY CHARGES

Toledoans Deny Check Fraud Charges At Arraignment.

TOLEDO — (UP) — William R. Parmele, president, and Edward A. Schwab, treasurer of Toledo Guaranty corporation, pleaded not guilty to charges of issuing checks to defraud before Common Pleas Judge James S Martin today.

Christian A Webb, attorney for Parmele, asked Judge Martin to reduce the $50,000 bond set for Parmele in municipal court. The court did not immediately rule on this plea.

PENNSY PAYS DIVIDEND

PHILADELPHIA —(AP)— The Pennsylvania Railroad company today declared a dividend of 75 cents a share payable December 20 to stockholders of record November 20. Last July the company paid a dividend of 50 cents a share.

The Great Game of Politics

—By FRANK R. KENT

A Test for the President.

SOME OF THE more astute political observers believe that fairly early in the session of congress to convene next week there will be an opportunity to judge Mr. Roosevelt's attitude toward the 1940 presidential nomination. They hold that the extent and degree to which he exerts himself to make good on his most recent and apparently very earnest declarations concerning economy, taxation and budget balancing will be an infallible indication of his intentions.

THE REASONS for regarding it as a test are clear. While it is true that every year since his first inauguration Mr. Roosevelt has held out the promise of a balanced budget and instead has consistently increased the debt and deepened the deficit, in the past he always has had an excuse—not a sound one, to be sure, but nevertheless of reasonable plausibility. The pump had to be primed, the price level had to be raised, a "more abundant life" had to be provided. In the past five years the incredible sum of seventeen billions of dollars has been expended for these broad, general purposes, a considerable part of which has been wasted.

* * *

THE IMMENSE weight of indirect taxes bears today more heavily upon the poor than it ever has before, and the country distinctly is not on its feet. On the contrary, the present flat state of business threatens a disaster that has alarmed every administration adviser and brought the president to a point where his protestations concerning the federal finances have a ring of sincerity they heretofore have lacked. Word has gone down the line from him that the pump-priming days are over, that in the future every appropriation must carry its liquidating tax, that the equilibrium of the federal treasury must be regained—and without delay.

IT IS ALL very reassuring but it will be much more solidly so if these earnest expressions are followed by equally earnest action. It is the quality of what he does along these lines rather than what he says by which the president will be judged in the next few months. The only way in which he can make any progress toward a restoration of national solvency is by taking two steps, concededly unpopular with the large groups in which he has his greatest political strength. One of these steps is the reduction of expenses, the other the increase in taxes.

* * *

NO PRESIDENT can do either without losing popularity among the classes affected, but this president, far more than any other, has built himself up politically by posing as the national Santa Claus, lavishly distributing billions for the benefit of the poor; at the same time promulgating the idea that the taxes came out of the wealthy. The point has been reached now where he can no longer continue doing either without extreme danger to everybody. The high cost of living daily demonstrates the utter fallacy of the notion that the rich pay the bill and the poor ride free. Yet, to cut off the flow of funds and increase the number of taxpayers is intense repugnant to a leader such as Mr. Roosevelt, who has gone so far in the other direction and convinced so many people that there was no limit to the government largess and no reason to worry, while the New Deal prevailed.

TO REVERSE himself now may make him less popular with the classes he has taught to think that the government must take care of them, and Mr. Roosevelt dearly loves to be popular. The argument is that if he puts his full weight back of his words, cuts and taxes as he must if he wants to achieve a balance, it will mean that he has put politics and personal ambition out of his head and is free to do what he knows ought to be done with all his might. And if he does not go the limit for economy and taxation, if he is perfunctory, as he was in his opposition to the soldier bonus, if he does not really fight to get us back on an even keel, it will be a sure sign that he has not dismissed politics and that he is thinking in terms of 1940.

* * *

OF COURSE, if he now puts all thought of politics and popularity from him and hews to the line, his ultimate place in history will be very much higher than if he fails to exert himself for fear of losing popularity. It is difficult for a man in his position to be clear-headed about himself, but one would think he had at least some friends who could tell him convincingly that the chances of anyone having a third term as president in this country are negligible, but the sure way to make them non-existent is to plan and play for one. No president is smart enough to do that without its being smelt. And one whiff is enough.

Hollywood Speaks—

—By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—Accent on youth:

Executives 30 years old and younger, writers who were office boys a few years ago (like Norman Krasna), producers and associate producers just over the 30 line—they're common. And I've just met a director who's only 23, who has a co-director who's 27.

It's true that Billy Witney, the younger, and Jack English are co-directors in the comparatively inexpensive serial field. But what other business will entrust the handling of an investment between $80,000 and $100,000 to a couple of youngsters? They've just finished 13 episodes of action and thrills called "Return of Zorro" and done it—26 reels—in 25 days. That's no longer than the serial-makers give the veterans to grind out one of their products—but then Billy and Jack are veterans.

Both used to be office boys. Both went through the mill. Billy had two years in the cutting rooms, served as script clerk and then assistant director. Jack has worked in the film laboratory, camera department, film cutting; has been assistant director. Both say it makes their present jobs easier—they've worked with all the boys that now are working with them and there's no unpleasantness about who's in charge.

The serial field is where pictures are made fast and furiously. It may not be art, but it gets done. The day is wasted that doesn't see four reels of film exposed and canned, or at least one reel of edited film, ready for release. That's about 10 minutes of screen time—and on a major studio lot a director figures he's lucky if a day's work gives him four minutes.

"We don't have time for much rehearsing," Billy Witney explains. "We have to have people who know what's wanted and can go ahead and do it right the first time."

A serial's time budget is estimated practically to the last minute, which means that every minute of production has to count. On location, where most serials are made, the director has to keep up with the sun. Not infrequently, if working in a canyon at noon, he has to climb the hill and shoot as he climbs in order to follow the sun.

AUTO WORKERS BACK AT JOBS

11,000 Hudson Employes Return Pending Settlement of Dispute.

DETROIT—(AP)—Eleven thousand employes of the Hudson Motor Car company, idle yesterday because of a labor dispute, returned to work today pending final settlement of difference between the company and the United Automobile Workers of America.

The Bohn Aluminum and Brass corporation plant No. 2, also involved in labor difficulties, remained closed.

A spokesman for the U.A.W.A. said the Hudson company had agreed to re-time operations in the paint department where the dispute centered yesterday.

HEARS UTILITY CASE.

WASHINGTON—(U.P.)—The supreme court, it was announced today, will hear arguments tomorrow on the Pacific Gas & Electric company case in which the government seeks reversal by the court of a 39-year-old utilities rate-making precedent.

Father Wants Girl to Quit School, Work

By VIRGINIA LEE

UNDECIDED is a girl of 15 who is a junior in school and wants to go on with her studies. Her father, however, wants her to stop school so she can help with the housework at home and her older sister can get a job—to help finance their large family, presumably.

Undecided also has a boy friend whom her father forbids her to see because she can't do her work properly and "go" all the time, he says. She thinks he may be right, but she isn't exactly "on the go," she states. She has thought of marriage as a way out, but knows older people like myself would disapprove.

You are in a quandary. Undecided, but I do not believe the state law governing employment would permit you to leave school until you are at least 16. Why not tell your father, too, that if you finish your studies you will be able to get a better paying job when you are old enough to go to work?

I think you are a wise girl to realize that you are too young to marry. That is not the answer to your problem. It is one of the great problems young people meet when they belong to large families with small incomes. The children have nothing to do with being brought into the world, but are expected to get to work as soon as possibue to help support the large family. It is unfair.

As you are under the legal working age, I hope you can continue your schooling for at least one more year, and then maybe you could combine working at home and studying at night for your diploma. Couldn't your school principal talk to your fateher and try to win him over? It is so much to your advantage to get all the education you can. It is a shame to quit now unless you are absolutely needed at home.

REVEALS FORT AS DUEL SITE

ST. PAUL — (U.P.) — Peacefulness marks the lives of soldiers stationed at Fort Snelling these days, with athletic games and mimic battles probably the most heated activity on the reservation.

But not so during the regime of Col. Josiah Snelling, who established the fort in 1819. In those days, a letter reveals, the colonel resorted to revolvers to settle ill feeling.

The letter, written by Maj.-Gen. Stanley H. Ford, commanding the 7th corps area from Omaha, to Brig-Gen. Campbell Hodges, commandant at the fort, disclosed that Col. Snelling once engaged in a revolver duel with a Lieut. Baxley.

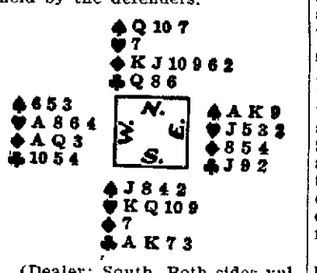
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

BEWARE A SINGLETON

IF YOUR partner's bidding indicates that he has practically nothing of importance in his hand except one suit, a no trump contract is highly risky unless you possess at least a couple of cards of that suit. With just a singleton you are in position to make only one lead of the suit, and so require side entries in the dummy to use it. There is the additional fact that your holding of the singleton automatically increases the number of cards in the suit held by the defenders.



(Dealer: South. Both sides vulnerable.)

One-Club was South's initial bid on this deal and 1-Diamond was North's response. South now bid 1-Heart and North rebid his diamonds at the two level. When South bid 2-No Trumps, North took the contract to 3-No Trumps and West doubled.

The spade 6 was the opening lead. The spade 7 was played from dummy, to attempt to create an entry in that suit into the dummy. East, however, decided to do all he could to kill the dummy, so he played the 9 and South won with the J. The diamond 7 was finessed and the J held. The diamond K was now laid down and West won with the A. A spade was returned and West cashed his K and A. It as now impossible for South to set up the diamond suit, as the club Q was the only entry to the dummy and an additional entry was needed to drive out the diamond Q before running the remainder of the suit.

Had South held one more diamond, it would have been a simple matter for him to have made this doubled contract.

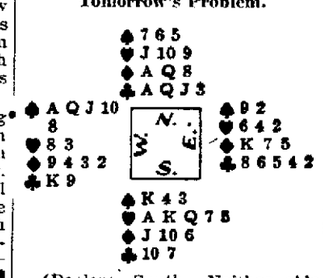
Tomorrow's Problem.



(Dealer: South. Neither side vulnerable.)

How should South play to make his contract of 4-Hearts?

Keep Half Moons on Fingernails

By GLADYS GLAD
"America's Most Famous Beauty"

A NEW YOK skin specialist recently said that he considers a beautiful hand as rare as a really perfect face. And truly perfect faces, he believes, certainly are rare. But he also adds that one seldom sees a hand so ugly that it cannot be improved upon and given a semblance of beauty.

Frances Dee, screen actress, has been endowed with a shapely figure, lovely features, and she also possesses correspondingly lovely hands. And she claims that her hands are beautiful chiefly because she knows how to care for and groom them properly.

Proper care and grooming of the hands do have a great deal to do with their attractiveness. And one of the chief points in nail care that Frances Dee is particular about is that she preserves the delicate lines of the half-moons on her finger-nails. When the half-moons on the fingernails are clearly defined and properly shaped, they add to the beauty of the fingertips. However, it sometimes proves quite a difficult task to keep the half-moons perfectly exposed, for the cuticle, if neglected, tends so quickly to adhere to the nails and to conceal them either partially or entirely.

The whole trick in preserving attractive half-moons lies in giving them proper care. The nails must not be neglected, and the cuticle must not be given an opportunity to adhere. Any girl who really wishes attractive fingertips should not be content merely with a weekly manicure. That is important, of course, but in addition to this, a girl has to give her fingernails daily care, if she's aiming for perfection.

Give Daily Massage.

If you are attempting to develop or preserve perfect half-moons on your fingernails, you should give your cuticle a daily massage. The cuticle is very sensitive and tender, you know, but when neglected, often tends to become thick and horny. A bit of cotton should be wrapped around an orangewood stick, to massage the cuticle, and then dipped in cuticle oil or warmed olive oil. Then each nail should be gone over with the oiled tip, working from the nail tip to the cuticle. Next the orangewood stick should be passed over the base of each nail and the cuticle gently pushed back. This should be repeated over each fingertip every single day, in order to keep the cuticle supple and in good condition.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

Dicky exploded into a laugh as I hung up the receiver upon Katie's reiterated assurance that she would be at the farmhouse by nine o'clock, prepared to take the domestic reins from the hands of Mrs. Ticer.

"Our Katie has a most penetrating voice," he chuckled. "I was able to catch most of her highly edifying conversation."

"I hope she won't get here until after Mrs. Ticer goes home," I said worriedly.

"Why cry for the moon?" he countered. "She's planning to get here at nine, and la Ticer won't be through serving breakfast by that time?"

"She could be if you'd get up and have breakfast early" I said. "I'm going to get breakfast for Father before daylight, and Mother will want an early tray in her room, so—"

"So you'd like to make me the goat with capitals," he gibed. "Well, old Dear, I'm desolated to refuse you anything, but I'm not going to change my breakfast hour to suit Mrs. Ticer or Katie—"

Dicky Jesting.

"Or me," I interposed quickly and a trifle pettishly, and then I heard his tantalizing chuckle, and realized that he was playing a jest on me.

"Was Tootsie peeved at her Toodle-ums?" he queried, using the vernacular which he knows enrages me. "Hasn't it percolated through her alleged brain cells yet that Hubby has a breakfast date with revered daddy-in-law?"

"Oh, Dicky!" I exclaimed contritely, "I really didn't think about your getting up for breakfast with Father. I was just obsessed with the idea that he mustn't go off without breakfast, and that I must get it for him."

Can't Exclude Him.

"And you also have another obsession about Mrs. Ticer and Katie," he retorted. "Better take one at a time, old Dear—you'll handle 'em better. But you should have known that nothing but 'battle, murder and sudden death' could keep me from seeing the dear old chief off."

"I do know it," I said humbly, "and—"

"Tin the rest of the apology, it isn't needed," he said with an indignant grin. "Where are you going now? That isn't the direction of the stairway."

"But it is to the kithen," I said gaily, "and you know what Father is when he's starting on a journey. He'll leave on the minute he named whether he has breakfast or not. I must get everything ready so that I can cook and serve his breakfast in record time. But I don't need you. Go on up to bed."

Dicky Will Help.

My husband chuckled and, slipping his hand under my elbow, propelled me rapidly toward the kitchen.

"To put the reverse English on Dickens," he gibed, "let it be announced now, that never will I desert Mrs. Graham-Micawber. I'm no great shakes as scullery boy, but 'it's aisy tached I be', so bring on your chores."

"I'll permit you to squeeze the oranges while I set the table," I told him.

"You are so sweet," he groaned, for he detests the task I had named. But he attacked it valiantly, and as I went at my own tasks with equal vigor, it was but a few minutes before I gave a final look of inspection at table and refrigerator and pronounced everything in readiness.

"Don't go up just yet," Dicky said surprisingly when I announced my satisfaction with our preparations. "I'd send you up alone, only I know you wouldn't go."

I looked at him searchingly. Something was troubling him.

"What's the matter?" I asked.

"I don't know—yet," he said. "But turn out the light right beside you and then don't move."

Answers to Hostess Questions

By EMILY POST

Dear Mrs. Post: Three sisters are going to entertain for a friend who recently announced her engagement. The problem is this: The eldest sister is the special friend of the bride-to-be, but the sister next to the eldest is married and we are wondering whether this fact will make it necessary that she sit at the head of the table, and if so, is the guest of honor seated at her right? Or how?

Answer. Whichever sister is considered the hostess sits at the head of the table, and the guest at her right. If the married sister lives in her own house, the one older unmarried one who lives at home is certainly the hostess. If both live at home I still think the older sister is the proper hostess (unless the married one runs the house). In any case the one who sits at the head of the table on that particular day is hostess.

Dear Mrs. Post: Will you kindly tell me something about the duties of a social hostess. I shall appreciate the information more than I can tell you as I believe I would like to fit myself for such a position.

Answer: The duties of a professional hostess vary somewhat in each hotel, which the management will explain to you when you secure a position. In general outline, you make yourself tactfully useful. The emphasis is on the word tact which must include accuracy of preception amounting to a sixth sense, so as not to neglect those who need your assistance, but on the other hand not to force your attentions on those who really want to be let alone.

Dear Mrs Post: In this instance, the mother of the groom is having the wedding at her home and wishes to know how to word the invitations correctly. The mother of the bride lives in another city, but just the same she feels that she has the right to have her name on the invitations. I can find no form anywhere that takes care of this situation. Will you please write one.

Answer: If the mother of the bride is actually giving the wedding—in other words, if she is paying the expense of it, then the form is:

Mrs. John Henry Blank
requests the honor of your presence at the marriage of her daughter
Mary Lou
to
Mr. John Bridegroom

Household Hints

By MRS. MARY MORTON

Menu Hint.

Grape Fruit Juice Canapes
Roast Beef
Potatoes Baked With Meat
Brussels Sprouts
Sliced Tomatoes, Pepper and Salt
Olives
Pickled Pears or Peaches
Fruit Platter and Cheese Coffee

This rather formal dinner menu might be changed by omiting the tomatoes, as the dessert is a fruit platter. Or, better still, serve a fruit sherbet with the meat course. I had one served to me at a dinner recently, and it is delicious. Sherbets are easily made now, both in the electric and new ice refrigerators, and they are inexpensive. Or they can, of course, be purchased.

The American housewife has adopted from the French the custom of serving fresh fruit and crackers and cheese at the close of the dinner or luncheon. Apples are usually included in these fresh fruit platters because of all fruits, apples have a perfect affinity for cheese.

A firm, ruddy skinned eating apple—often a Winesap—is selected as the best variety to lend color and flavor to the fruit platter. A popular combination for the after-dinner fruit platter includes unpeeled scarlet-skinned apple strips cut to fit orange and grapefruit segments. These are arranged together in alternating layers until the grouping of fruit is about the size of a large half apple. Each grouping which is an individual serving is arranged on a large wooden platter with a garnish of water cress. Seedless white grapes in clusters make an interesting central garnish for the platter.

When served as an after dinner fruit platter with crackers and cheese, as suggested here, no salad dressing accompanies the fruit. A thin sharp French dressing may be served if the fruit is used as a regular salad course.

Kenmore to Test Tyger Air Defense

Mansfield's Victory Hopes Hinge on Ability to Halt Akron Passing Attack at Stadium Field Saturday.

The weakness that has hampered Mansfield all season—pass defense—is expected to face one of its biggest tests of the season Saturday when the air-minded Akron Kenmore gridsters invade Stadium field for a battle with the Tygers.

All year Coach Murphy has been drilling the club on an adequate defense against this weakness, but the squad's lack of height has been the big obstacle.

Mansfield was able, in most of its games, to come through with flashes of a good defense when it counted, and Saturday will see if the club can rise to the occasion when the pressure is on.

Kenmore's aerial offense is built around its brilliant triple-threat ace, Lloyd Miller, and the receiving department which is considered one of the best in the school's history.

Against this constant scoring threat the Tygers will toss its top-notch ball toter, Johnny Hallibrin, in an effort to overcome the air advantage. Hallibran's ball carrying has been the highlight of all the Mansfield team's battles, and Kenmore may have trouble in stopping him.

Although the Akron running attack is not on a par with the Tygers', it is likely to prove troublesome. Miller is the spearhead, and on several occasions this year he has broke loose for long touchdown gallops.

Mansfield will hold no weight advantage on the line Saturday, but will have an edge over the backfield. Miller, who holds down the fullback post, is the biggest, weighing around 175. The invaders will have a big edge in height, however.

RAMS PREP TO DEFEND LOOP TITLE

COACH AL FENDRICK had his undefeated Madison Rams working at top speed today as he prepared for the crucial Mid-State league tilt with Bellville's classy grid warriors under the lights at Madison stadium Friday night.

The Rams, Mid-State defending champions, will be gunning for their seventh straight victory for the season. Two of Madison's triumphs were chalked up at the expense of non-league teams.

In Bellville Madison faces one of the finest pigskin clubs to represent that school in several years. The invaders, coached by Boyd Hodges, former Ashland college star, will hand the Rams a weight advantage, but are expected to make up for it with plenty of fight.

Bellville has registered four league victories against a single defeat, which was handed them by the powerful unbeaten Mt. Gilead Indians.

Other league tussles will see three teams making their final appearance of the season. Fredericktown, without a triumph, invades Danville for a battle that will close the year for both aggregations. At Mt. Gilead, the Loudonville Red Birds bring their season to a close in an interesting tilt with the Indians.

AT ARMORY THURSDAY

Lem Stecklin, pictured above with his pet raccoon, Oscar, will meet Walter Achine, Chinese star, in one of the main bouts on the Quality club's grapple show at the Armory Thursday night.

KASABOSKI-BLAKE BOUT ADDED TO GRAPPLE CARD

Stars Meet In Tourney Elimination Bout on Quality Club's Show at Armory Thursday Night.

Another main event was announced today by Tim Nolan to complete the Quality club's Thursday night wrestling show at the Armory.

Matchmaker Nolan has secured Babe Kasaboski, Mansfield favorite, from Toronto, Can., and Bob Blake, Toledo star, to clash in one of the 90-minute elimination tournament matches on the card.

With the addition of the Kasaboski-Blake affair, the club's weekly presentation, postponed from Monday night, includes two 90-minute, two-best-out-of-three-fall melees, and an interesting 20-minute opener.

Headlining the list of burp artists signed by Nolan for the card is Lem Stecklin, the bearded giant and groan star from the Smoky mountains of Tennessee, who tackles the powerful Chinese wrestler, Walter Achine, a former Dayton university grid ace. Achine was also a member of the Portsmouth Spartans, pro football club, for three years.

The hill-billy star will introduce something new to Mansfield grapple followers Thursday. He will be the first artist to have a second in his corner. The new member is "Oscar," his pet raccoon, and a constant companion.

Stecklin will wear overalls instead of shorts when he takes on the Chinese star. He will also be barefooted.

The Stecklin-Achine match is another of the elimination tournament bouts which the club will offer this fall and winter.

The final winner will receive a purse and a shot at the world's lightheavyweight crown. Two defeats automatically eliminate the wrestlers.

Reserves Bow To Ashland

With the regulars on the sidelines preparing for duty in the Akron Kenmore game, the Mansfield Reserves bowed to the Ashland Jayvees, 20 to 6, in a grid tilt at Stadium field Tuesday.

Mansfield hopped into the lead in the opening period, but Ashland came through with a pair of tallies in the second quarter to take a lead it never relinquished.

LeMunyon put the Reserves ahead when he galloped 60 yards for the opening touchdown. Ashland garnered two points in the same stanza when Bally tackled LeMunyon behind the goal line.

The Jayvees came back in the second chapter to score on a 40-yeard march, with Howell going over from the two. A few minutes later he slipped off-tackle for 45 yards to mark up Ashland's second touchdown.

Ashland's final tally was scored from the Mansfield four, with Howell again carrying the oval over.

SOUTH BEND, Ind.—Under the late Knute K. Rockne, a shrewd strategist, master psychologist and one of the greatest showmen of all time, Notre Dame football teams soared to heights never touched before in gridiron history.

Notre Dame had five undefeated teams in Rockne's 13 years as coach. Three of his teams became "national champions." Three others won recognition as "western champions."

Rockne's teams rolled up the stunning total of 105 victories in 122 starts, losing 12 games and tying 5.

When he took charge at Notre Dame in 1918, Rockne not only wanted to produce great teams, but he wanted to gain for his alma mater a pre-eminent place in the football world.

He scheduled the most colorful teams in the country. He popularized intersectional games. His teams played from coast to coast and from the Great Lakes to the Gulf.

He injected sparkle into his teams' play. He substituted whole teams at a time. His squads played an open, thrilling game that the spectators liked.

He became a target of those who contended football was being over-emphasized.

FOOTBALL AND EDUCATION

But Rockne told his critics, "this is the 20th century. The old order has changed. To limit a college education to books, classrooms and laboratories is to give education too narrow a meaning for modern times. The greatest contribution to education by the students themselves is the modern system of football."

Rockne's ideas paid Notre Dame large dividends. In 1930 the new $750,000 stadium was opened. Since 1928 the school has erected other buildings valued at $6,000,000, much of the money coming from football receipts.

He established certain methods of play which became known as the Rockne system.

On offense his players lined up in a balanced formation. The ends, at a signal, leaped outward three yards. One of the backs also jumped out to a position behind an end. Two of the other backs formed a tandem on the same side, facing spaces between the offensive guard and tackle. The fourth back stood behind center, even with the second back in the tandem.

The Irish hit every point in the line, in every way, from this formation.

On defense Rockne's teams had seven men on the line, all preliminarily wide, but closing in as soon as the offense was set, until the Notre Dame tackles faced the offensive ends. The Irish ends varied from three to four yards out. The guards and center divided the intervening space, with the center on that side of the line of his opponent which would cause him to face the strong side of the backfield offensive formation.

WONDER TEAMS

Rockne's first national championship team, the 1924 squad, won 10 straight games, scoring 288 points to the opponents' 54. Among the victims were Army, Princeton, Georgia Tech, Carnegie Tech and Stanford.

Rockne's second national championship team, the 1929 aggregation, captured nine straight games, scoring 146 points to the opponents' 38. Notre Dame's third national champions, the 1930 squad and Rockne's last, took 10 consecutive battles, scoring 244 points to 78.

Rockne had a theory that touchdowns could be made easier from midfield than from inside the 20-yard marker. He called the area up to the 20-yard line a "zone of intense resistance."

His style of play, an open and spectacular game, usually resulted in long gains or no gains. He gambled on the ability of his backs to get into the clear.

Rockne's system was responsible for Bucky O'Connor's 80-yard touchdown run against Southern California in 1930, a game the Irish won 27-0. Two weeks before, Notre Dame nosed out Army, 7-6 on Marchie Schwartz's 54-yard touchdown run and an extra point.

A book could be written about Rockne's classic pep talks and use of psychology.

In 1925 Northwestern had the Irish 10-0 at the half. Rockne walked into the dressing room between halves and said nothing until just before play was to be resumed.

Then he blurted out, "You can have the honor of being the first Notre Dame team to quit. I'm through with you and will sit in the stadium the rest of the game."

His players went back and fought like mad. The play improved so much Rockne relented and came back to the bench. The Irish won, 13-10.

Rockne's death in a Kansas airplane crash March 31, 1931, was a staggering blow.

"Can Notre Dame Carry On?" was the big question in everyone's mind.

(Next: Chaos after Rockne.)

FOUR OF THESE MEN WERE STARS
Rockne's most famous backfield was his 1924 combination, known everywhere as "The Four Horsemen of Notre Dame." Left to right: Don Miller, Harry Stuhldreher, Jim Crowley, Elmer Layden. Stuhldreher made the all-America team.

THREE OF THESE MEN ARE HEAD COACHES

SASSE RESIGNS

STATE COLLEGE, Miss.—(AP)—Ill health has compelled Lieut.-Col Ralph Sasse, who coached three successful Army elevens, to relinquish his duties as head football coach of Mississippi State college.

It was assumed that Capt. John Stokes, line coach, would take over the duties of Sasse. University President G. D. Humphrey said Sasse, confined to his bed, resigned yesterday on orders of his physician.

Ohio "Listless" As It Prepares For Illi

COLUMBUS — (U.P.) — The same problem that confronted the Ohio State coaching staff after the Notre Dame debacle two seasons ago was faced again today by the Buck mentors.

After the crushing defeat at the hands of the Irish in 1935, the spirit of the Scarlet and Gray squad dropped to a low level. The coaching staff wasn't exactly a howling success in bolstering the morale during the following week and the Bucks were hard pushed to beat a weak Chicago combine 18 to 13 in their next out.

The Notre Dame defeat two years ago burst the national championship bubble for Ohio State and last Saturday's loss to Indiana practically wiped out chances for a Big Ten title. The reaction to both defeats left the players "down."

Bucks 'Discouraged.'

Coach Francis A. Schmidt, the gruff head coach, refused to admit any great change in the spirit of the squad, but he did concede the Bucks were "discouraged" by their failure to score during the early part of the Indiana game.

It was a decidedly listless squad that Schmidt sent through its paces yesterday in preparation for the Illinois contest.

At least one half of the players who have held starting berths this season were late in reporting for the drill. Numerous players "loafed" in the offices under the stadium or in the training rooms after their more ambitious mates were already on the field.

One prominent backfield man threatened to quit the squad prior to the encounter with the Hoosiers.

Several sophomores were reported disgruntled over their failure to see more service this season. On the basis of time played thus far it isn't likely that more than seven sophomores would win letters.

Whether the Bucks snap out of the doldrums prior to Saturday is a question that likely will have an important bearing on the outcome of the Illinois contest.

The team was given a long offensive drill yesterday.

INDUSTRIALS, UTILITIES TOP EARLY TRADING

Shares Changing Hands in Large Blocks; Market Up 3 Points.

NEW YORK—(AP)—The stock market pushed up fractions to almost 3 points today.

Utilities and industrials were most active, changing hands in blocks of 1,000 to 7,000 shares. Early in the first hour trading was all brisk the ticker tape fell behind the market, but later turnover shrank.

Demand for power issues was said by brokers to be prompted by President Roosevelt's suggestion a working arrangement could be achieved between the government and utilities if adequate rates could be established.

Bonds opened higher. Grains and cotton gained.

At the start of trading brokers were faced with uninspiring reports from the steel and electric power industries.

Continued failure of the motor industry to buy as aggressively as expected was again discouraging to holders of steel shares.

"Iron Age" noted general incoming business in the steel trade has fallen and said it was problematical whether the production rate has yet reached bottom.

BOSTON WOOL

BOSTON—(AP)—(U. S. Dept. of Agr.)—There was little demand for wool in Boston yesterday. Buyers made some inquiries but bids were generally several cents lower than most dealers were willing to consider. Some dealers were reported to have accepted low bids on occasional small lots of original bags of fine territory wools.

RED CROSS TO OPEN CAMPAIGN

Roll Call Dinner Tonight for Workers Launches Annual Drive for Members.

Meanwhile the city took on the appearance of a Red Cross stronghold as the red and white banners of the organization fluttered from light poles on both sides of Main street from Third street up to Central park around the park and on Park avenue west to Walnut street. Two Red Cross flags hung from the cross bars on the light standards.

Hundreds of colorful posters were placed in store windows throughout the city by a committee comprised of Harold Mansfield John Vogt, E. Karl Renshler and Donald Cram. Four thousand folders, telling briefly of the work of the Richland county chapter of the Red Cross, were distributed during the past week through the mails and the speakers committee.

Approximately 50 workers, the largest number ever assembled for a membership drive in the county, will start the work of contacting every home in the city and county, tomorrow. The drive runs through Thanksgiving day.

BRITAIN MOURNS STORMY LEADER

Monday and returned for burial either in England or at his beloved Lossiemouth, Scotland.

The two-room cottage where he was born Oct. 12, 1866, still is standing in Loosiemouth.

Tribute came from all parties for the man who rose from that humble dwelling to No. 10 Downing street. But the tribute was for two distinct phases of his career.

Conservatives praised MacDonald's momentous action in forming a national government at the behest of King George V in the financial crisis of 1931—an action which cost him the friendship of virtually all his old labor and socialist colleagues.

But his one-time co-workers, who in 1931 had denounced as deserting them "for the drawing rooms of the rich," today praised his work for labor before the great split.

Aloof and almost autocratic, MacDonald twice won the dubious title of "the most hated man in British politics"—for his pacifist stand during the World war and for his leaving of the labor party to form the coalition government following the financial crisis of '31. He had become Britain's first labor prime minister in 1924.

Only six weeks ago the Scotsman who never accumulated wealth was bequeathed about $200,000 in trust by Sir Alexander Grant, a biscuit manufacturer and close friend of the former prime minister.

DOCTOR PLEADS INNOCENT TO 2 DOPE CHARGES

Second Indictment Served on Sawyer in Court; No Date Set for Trial.

Arraigned on two grand jury indictments accusing him of illegal sale of narcotics and failing to keep proper records of narcotic sales, Dr. James Sawyer, 63, of 96 South Main street, pleaded innocent to both charges this morning before Judge C. H. Huston in common pleas court.

The pleas were entered by Atty. John C. O'Donnell, representing Dr. Sawyer. The defendant made no comment. Date for the trial had not been set today.

The indictment for failing to keep records of sales was returned secretly by the grand jury last week and the warrant on the indictment was not served on Sawyer until he appeared in court this morning.

Sawyer was arrested by police at his home a month ago after an alleged drug addict had been used as a "decoy" to purchase morphine from the physician.

Sawyer had been free on $3,000 bond since his arrest. The bond was renewed following the arraignment this morning.

2 Fathers Face Court.

Also brought before Judge Huston today were R. F. Gottas, 66 Harter avenue, and Andrew Kissell of Franklin township, both charged with failing to send their children to school. The two pleaded innocent and hearings were set for Friday morning.

Charges against Gottas were filed by A. H. Wood, Mansfield school attendance officer, while Kissell was cited on the complaint of H. J. Sir Louis, Richland county truant officer.

John Reynolds, 22, colored, 270½ North Mulberry, pleaded guilty to an indictment for carrying concealed weapons and was placed on probation for three years. He was ordered to report to Court Bailiff Harry Crouse and to obtain the approval of a colored pastor for each report.

Reynolds was arrested late in September after he dropped a pistol in a northside restaurant, causing the weapon to discharge and injure a colored woman.

Discuss Plan To Inform Public of Jobless Census

A program to acquaint the public with the purpose of the National Unemployment Census, which will be started here next week, was outlined last night at a meeting of the citizens committee, appointed by Mayor Earl A. McFarland.

The committee considered ways and means of creating public acceptance to the census, the biggest job of its kind since the 1930 census.

Gertrude B. English, executive secretary of the Red Cross, and Paul W. Williams, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce were appointed by Chairman George H. Blecker as a publicity committee.

Williams said today that the committee planned to appeal to civic organizations and clubs asking for their support in urging all unemployed or partly employed persons to register.

Postmaster Herman E. Homberger explained that postal employes will distribute cards to 16,000 homes in the Mansfield district. A request that the questionnaire be filled in and returned before midnight Nov. 20, appears on each card.

Congress at its last session directed that the census be taken to provide aid in the formation of a program for re-employment, social security, and unemployment relief.

ME STAY HOME FROM WORK?
NO SIR!
NOT WHEN GENUINE BAYER ASPIRIN EASES HEADACHE IN A FEW MINUTES

The inexpensive way to ease headaches — if you want fast results — is with Bayer Aspirin.

The instant the pain starts, simply take 2 Bayer tablets with a half glass of water. Usually in a few minutes relief arrives.

Bayer tablets are quick-acting because they disintegrate in a few seconds — ready to start their work of relief almost immediately after taking.

It costs only 2¢ or 3¢ to relieve most headaches — when you get the new economy tin. You pay only 25 cents for 24 tablets — about 1¢ apiece.

Make sure to get the genuine by insisting on Bayer Aspirin.

TWO FIRE CALLS

Tar Overflows at Westinghouse; Furnace Causes Second Blaze.

City firemen answered two calls yesterday, reports at central station showed today.

A kettle of tar that overflowed caused only a minor fire in building E at the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company. No damage was reported. Fire from an overheated furnace at the home of George Angelo, 154 Johns avenue, last night was extinguished with only slight damage.

JOIN IN TRIBUTE TO SOLDIER DEAD

the column reaches Central park, in front of the illuminated Red Cross. Here Commander Cook and Mrs. Eugene Flory, president of the auxiliary, will present to the Red Cross Roll Call committee the membership contribution of the two organizations.

In the column will be two new music units. The new McVey drum corps will make its first appearance, as well as the recently organized John Simpson junior high school band in new uniforms.

The parade column will be headed by city police on motorcycles, the grand marshal, Col. J. Earl Ports and his aides, John W. Stentz and Vernon G. Castor; massed colors, riflemen, the Legion drum corps, the G.A.R., the American Legion auxiliary, veterans of the Spanish war and their auxiliary.

Other units in the column will be the Senior high school band and drum and bugle corps; Battery D. 134th F. A.; the Richland County Reserve Officers; city firemen and mail carriers; Prospect park band; the Legion troop of Boy Scouts, Women's Relief corps, Daughters of Union Veterans, Sons of Union Veterans, and their auxiliary units, Sarah E. Lewis Junior Relief corps, the Junior Order of U.A.M., the Odd Fellows, and the Red Cross ambulances.

Arrangements for the parade and Armistice day activities have been made by a committee comprised of Ralph Hughes, chairman; Wickham L. Old and W. C. Meade.

WARS ON RATS

Veteran Exterminator Begins Campaign In Mansfield.

E. L. Strawsburg who makes a business of exterminating rodents and vermin had a campaign against the pests under way in Mansfield today.

For the last 17 years, Strawsburg has been making trips throughout the nation in his war on rats.

"Poison is the most effective means of combatting rodents where they overrun a property," Strawsburg said. "The reason no dead rats are found when poison is used is that they live and breed a foot and a half under the ground, and when they are stricken return to their nests and die."

Strawsburg pointed out that if property owners catch the first rat they see they will very likely catch the "scout" for searchers for feeding places. His death will not bring any more rodents to the premises for a long time.

Strawsburg can be reached either through the city health department or the Chamber of Commerce.

PLAN FOR SCOUT COURT OF HONOR

Officials Choose Ashland as Place, Nov. 26 as Date For District Event.

Plans for an area court of honor and a scout rally, to be held in Ashland Nov. 26, were completed last night at a meeting of officials of the Johnny Appleseed area in Ashland.

The court will be held in the Ashland high school auditorium, and will conclude a full day of activities. More than 400 scouts are expected to take part in the rally, according to Floyd Dent, area scout executive. Some 200 of these will be from Mansfield troops.

In the afternoon all troops in the area will participate in a treasure hunt, conducted by troop patrols, with prizes for the patrol that is successful in the hunt. Trails over which the hunt will be conducted will be mapped out by scout officials.

The court of honor in the evening will be preceded by a program of scout demonstrations. The area court of honor will be in charge of J. Leo Hartmann, Mansfield, chairman of the court. An Ashland court will be in charge of Ashland scout officials.

Attending the meeting were Floyd Dent, and D. D. Montoya, representing the area, and C. A. Davis, chairman of the Ashland district, and Ashland scoutmasters.

FARMER FINDS PURSE IN FIELD

Loses $41 While Plowing, Gets It Back Two Years Later.

DELPHOS—(AP)—Corwin Heyman decided today his luck had taken a turn for the better.

Two years ago while plowing on his farm west of here he lost a purse containing $41. In plowing again last year, he searched for it in vain.

After the incident had become just a sad memory, he discovered the purse at the foot of a corn stalk as he labored at husking.

The bills were badly deteriorated but will be sent to Washington for redemption.

'CLOSED SHOP' UPHELD IN N. Y.

Brooklyn Justice Says Subway Employes Must Join Union To Hold Jobs.

NEW YORK —(AP)— Justice Mitchell May of the Brooklyn supreme court ruled today that the closed shop is constitutional in New York state and denied the request of six subway employes that they not be forced to join a union, to hold their jobs.

The subway workers, claiming the closed shop violated their constitutional right to earn livelihoods, brought suit to enjoin the Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit company and the Transport Workers Union of America, a CIO affiliate, from enforcing the closed shop agreement under which employes in certain classifications will be discharged unless they are union members by tonight.

In denying the injunction, Justice May asserted the agreement reached by the company and the union "as the duly selected and accredited bargaining agent for 11 out of 12 groups or categories on the Rapid Transit lines and buses of the said Transit Corporation falls within the permissive provisions of the labor laws of this state as enacted by the legislature, more particularly Article 20 of the labor law which became effective July 1, 1937."

Seeks Drastic Action to Aid 'Sick' Merchant Marine

BOARD SENDS SIX-PLY PLAN TO CONGRESS

Proposes Increase in Loans By U. S. for Construction Of New Vessels.

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The U S. maritime commission today called on congress to revise drastically the American ship subsidy program and asked creation of a maritime mediation board to deal with "chaotic" marine labor conditions.

Presenting a 126-page economic survey of the shipping industry, the board characterized the merchant marine as a "very sick industry," suffering primarily from outmoded tonnage and "disgraceful" labor conditions.

The commission proposed six changes which it said were essential to attainment of the objectives of the merchant marine act of 1936. They were

1. Assurances of protection of operators of subsidized ships against cancellation of government aid without just cause.

Would Increase Loans.

2. Reduction of the down payment required of operators for construction of new ships from 25 per cent of the domestic building cost to 25 per cent of the cost in a foreign shipyard. This would increase the amount of money which the government would lend for ship construction.

3. If the construction subsidy were greater than 50 per cent of the cost of a vessel, the operator would be permitted to build abroad.

4. Provisions for "recapture of profits" should be based on a 10-year instead of five-year period.

5. Enlargement of the commission's powers to relax restrictions relative to subsidiaries and foreign-flag affiliations.

6. Authority to waive the $25,000 salary limitation for executives of subsidized lines when it would be in the public interest.

The commission reported that of this country's total sea-going fleet of 1,422 vessels, 1,305 will be 20 years old or more—obsolete—by 1942. The commission stressed the seriousness of the outlook, declaring that of 31 steamship lines operating under ocean mail subsidy contracts, only nine are now considered certain of survival.

"Next to replacements, the most serious problem with which we are confronted is the labor situation," the board said. "Conditions aboard American vessels have been disgraceful. The commission recommends the establishment of a mediation board similar to that provided by the railway labor act as a solution to the present chaotic conditions in the ranks of maritime labor."

Youth Kills Self In Car As Girl Friend Calls Help

OXFORD — (U.P.) — Hubert E Kapp, 23, former student at Miami university, died in a Hamilton hospital today of a bullet wound which, police said, was self-inflicted

Eleanor Lockhart, 22, Northfield, O., senior at Miami university, told police Kapp and she had been riding last night when he showed signs of despondency and repeatedly told her "This is going to be our last ride," she told police she seized the ignition keys and jumped from Kapp's car near Oxford.

She ran toward the village to seek aid, she said. A block away from the car she heard a shot, Miss Lockhart said, and ran into the village where she met Marshal Randolph Duval.

Duval and Miss Lockhart returned and found Kapp with a wound in the temple A .32 caliber pistol was beside him on the seat. One shot had been fired from the weapon.

Duval called an ambulance and sent Kapp to Ft. Hamilton hospital, Hamilton, where he died a few hours later.

PROTESTS GROW OVER DAVEY'S RELIEF PLANS

$15,000,000 Program Draws Flat Rejection by Cities, State Legislators.

COLUMBUS —(U.P.)— Governor Davey's $15,000,000 poor relief program faced growing opposition today from the cities and from senate leaders who said flatly that they will not support the measure

Lieutenant Governor Paul P Yoder, leader of the senate "hatchet men" who controlled the upper house during the last session of the legislature, said that in his opinion the governor's program is "unworkable."

Matching Required.

The administration's relief program provides for expenditure of $7,500,000 by the state during 1938, with a like amount to be raised by the cities and counties through levies on real estate.

The special relief committees of the house and senate have tentatively approved a bill allocating $12,000,000 in state funds to relief and requiring local subdivisions to raise an additional $4,000,000. This plan has been endorsed by the municipalities.

"The governor's program is unworkable because he insists that local subdivisions raise the money by submitting real estate levies to the voters. It is extremely unlikely that these levies could be approved in most cities, even if the required vote is reduced from 65 per cent to a bare majority," Yoder said.

Representative Jacob F Myers, D., Franklin, criticized the governor for proposing that the required majority for approval of levies be reduced from 65 per cent to 50 per cent

Blotter Shows Armistice Day's Early For Police

Mansfield police celebrated Armistice day yesterday — two days ahead of schedule Whispers of "a model city" were heard around city hall today.

For the first time in years, not an arrest had been made in 24 hours.

Not only was the police blotter clean, but another precedent was set At noon the population of the city jail had dwindled to a lone inhabitant. He was there serving out an 11-day sentence for imbibing too freely.

The lull in activities even extended to the second floor, to municipal court where the criminal docket showed only one case on record, and that carried over from yesterday.

However members of the police department and municipal court attaches were very quiet on the subject Police Chief Meade K. Bates had his fingers crossed. His only remark was "remember, always a calm before a storm"

HELP STOMACH DIGEST FOOD

Without Laxatives—and You'll Eat Everything from Soup to Nuts

The stomach should digest two pounds of food daily When you eat heavy, greasy, coarse or rich foods or when you are nervous, hurried or chew poorly—your stomach pours out too much fluid. Your food doesn't digest and you have that heartburn, nausea, pain or sour stomach. You feel sour sick and upset all over

Doctors say never take a laxative for stomach pain. It is dangerous and foolish It takes those little black tablets called Bell-ans for Indigestion to make the excess stomach fluids harmless, relieve distress in 5 minutes and put you back on your feet. Relief is so quick it is amazing and one 25c package proves it. Ask for Bell-ans for Indigestion. Sold everywhere. (c) Bell & Co. 1937.

HAHN PROTESTS CELL TRANSFER

Blond Poison Murderess Says She'll 'Grieve to Death' If Kept From Son.

CINCINNATI—(AP)—Anna Marie Hahn, facing death in the electric chair as the poison slayer of an elderly gardener for his small savings, protested in vain today her transfer to a Columbus prison to await execution.

While the 31-year-old blonde said she would "grieve herself to death" if taken from her son, Warden James C Woodard of Ohio penitentiary announced at Columbus that the convicted woman would be kept in Columbus city prison.

Woodard announced that arrangements had been completed for her imprisonment after a conference with Mrs Margaret Allman, state welfare director. The warden said Mrs Hahn would be taken to city prison "until other arrangements" could be made.

"We might try to fix a place to keep her here at the penitentiary," Woodard added. The warden said Ohio law did not permit acceptance at Marysville reformatory of women prisoners sentenced to die Mrs. Hahn would be the first woman ever to be electrocuted in Ohio.

"If I am taken to Columbus they might as well get the chair ready," Mrs. Hahn commented in her cell at county courthouse.

She said she would "die anyway" if deprived of visits of her 12-year-old son, Oscar, who testified for his mother.

BURNED TO DEATH

CAMBRIDGE, O. —(AP)— Elias Burkhart, 54, was burned to death early today when fire destroyed the shack in which he lived alone at Mt. Ephraim, 15 miles southeast of here.

"Remarkable—the difference

Deep-Char Barrel Aging makes in a whiskey!"

says the OLD TOWN TAVERN KEEPER

Men who choose Town Tavern get more than a good 2-year-old whiskey. They get one that's aged in DEEP-CHARRED barrels of selected oak. And they taste the difference! That exact depth of char puts a marvelous finishing touch on this good rye! You'll recognize the extra goodness the moment you try Town Tavern!

THEATER

PARAMOUNT'S latest "epic" is due for release any time now. It is "Wells Fargo," the story of an era that saw the United States expand from Atlantic to Pacific. The Mexican war, the Civil war, discovery of gold, invention of the telegraph, the pony express and stage coach transportation, is the background of the story, against which moves the life story of two people, Ramsay MacKay and Justine Pryor. The one is an agent for the Wells-Fargo company and his mission is to extend the pony express westward; the other is a society belle who follows him to San Francisco and links her future with his. Joel McCrea and Frances Dee, who have a contract that they won't have to co-star together, break over for this picture. Strangely enough, this couple, considered one of the happiest in Hollywood, held up the works because they couldn't stage a convincing love scene before the camera.

A Fighting Lady.

After her tragic role in "Stella Dallas," Barbara Stanwyck turns to light romantic comedy in "Breakfast For Two," which the Ohio offers Thursday and the remainder of the week. Herbert Marshall, smooth and polished, also lays aside his habitual poise to receive a black eye from his feminine co-star. He is the idler and play boy who meets his Waterloo in a strange young woman he finds in his apartment one morning after a gay round of the night clubs. She turns out to be a lady from Texas, with millions and a penchant for fighting. After his wedding with a chorus girl is broken up twice by the girl from Texas, he follows the line of least resistence. Glenda Farrell and Eric Blore have major roles.

Boy Meets Family.

Delirious but romantic is "Danger—Love At Work," at the Madison today and tomorrow, in which Jack Haley and Ann Sothern are seen in a comedy of love in bloom in bedlam. Haley is thrown on to the bosom of a very squirrley family when he goes to their home to secure their names on a legal document. Mary Boland, charming feminine buffoon, is the matre of the family, all members of which are decidedly loco in pleasant, harmless ways. Summed up the story might be "Girl Meets Boy — Boy Meets Family — Boy Loses Mind." Some new songs are introduced and romance finds a happy ending.

A Villain Reforms.

Crime doesn't pay even on the screen, according to Cesar Romero, reformed villain who is doing a romantic hero in "Dangerously Yours," after several years of swarthy, suave bad men roles. Romero has accepted the villain roles only as a means to an end, believing his chance would come to play sympathetic roles. He had such a role as Khoda Khan in "Wee Willie Winkie" and did so well that he was rewarded with the hero role in "Dangerously Yours." Bad men roles, no matter how well they are done, seldom pay as well as heroic roles on the screen. Phyllis Brooks is seen opposite Romero in this story of a famous jewel and a number of persons who matched wits for it.

From Roundhouse to Screen.

No one, looking at the gay playboy characters that Robert Mongomery portrays on the screen, and especially his role in "Ever Since Eve" would ever suspect that he began his career by working in a railroad roundhouse. When he was 16, Bob and his brother, bought themselves overalls, red shirts and fancy handkerchiefs, and got jobs with the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad. Not being afraid of work, he worked as a deck hand on an oil tanker going from New York through the Panama Canal to the Pacific coast. His willingness to work has been one of the great factors in his success on the screen. His latest picture has him co-starring with Marian Davies in "Ever Since Eve" at the Ritz.

Plans Appeal

Barred from the United States by immigration authorities on grounds of "moral turpitude," Magda DeFontages, above, red-haired French journalist, today planned an appeal to the board of review in Washington. She said she would tell Washington authorities all about her alleged romance with Premier Benito Mussolini. She shot and wounded Count Charles Lineton de Chambrun because he "mixed into my private life," she told authorities. It was because of the shooting that she was excluded from the United States.

SENT TO PRISON

Woman Gets 1 to 15 Year Term on Charge of Cutting.

Arraigned before Common Pleas Judge C. H. Huston yesterday afternoon on an indictment charging her with cutting with intent to wound, Mrs. Laura Ramsey, 32, colored, of 256 North Franklin street, was sentenced to one to 15 years in the Marysville reformatory.

Mrs. Ramsey entered a plea of guilty through Atty. Harold Burns, appointed by the court to defend her. She was arrested by police following an altercation near her home in which she slashed a man across the face with a knife.

SWALLOWS 'DOG'

Girl, 5, Gulps Down Celluloid Toy While Eating Nuts.

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — (INS) — While eating peanuts, Betty Ann Sang, 5-year-old, swallowed a dog. It was a toy, celluloid one, however and physicians removed the article from her esophagus. She suffered no ill effects as the result of the experience.

LEGION STAGES SHOW SATURDAY

Annual Revue to Be Presented in Midnight Performance.

The American Legion will present its annual stage show Saturday midnight, when it brings the Swingtime Follies, a vaudeville revue, to the Ohio theater.

A number of acts of vaudeville, solo dancers, singers and comedians, and a swing band are included in the troupe.

The screen attraction, "The Adventurous Blond," featuring Glenda Farrell and Barton McLane, is a newspaper story written around the adventures of Torchy Blane, a girl reporter.

GIRL AWARDED $3,000 IN SUIT AGAINST ESCORT

Jury Deliberates Four Hours Before Reaching Verdict In Second Trial of Case.

After deliberating nearly four hours, a jury in common pleas court late yesterday awarded $3,000 to Miss Ruth Schaaf of near Lexington in her $5,329 damage suit against M. L. Eckman of Cleveland.

Miss Schaaf, who brought the action after she was injured in an automobile accident near Lexington in July, 1935, won a verdict for $1,300 when the case was tried more than a year ago. Eckman was granted a new trial in October, 1936.

Car Strikes Bridge.

The plaintiff contended in her suit that Eckman, her escort the evening the accident occurred, lost control of the car when he attempted to put his arms around her. The car hit the end of a bridge, throwing Miss Schaaf against the dash, causing her to lose all her front teeth.

Eckman contended he was blinded by the lights of another car and failed to see the bridge.

Judge C. U. Ahl of Crawford county heard the case.

Atty. Joseph A. Bayer was counsel for Miss Schaaf. Eckman was represented by Attys. Henry P. Huston, Mansfield; Robert Green of Shelby and C. W. Sellers of the Thompson, Hine and Flory law firm, Cleveland.

DETROIT BUILDS HOMES FOR POOR

City Constructs Residences Under FHA; All of Different Architectural Design.

DETROIT — (U.P.) — The Detroit Council Housing committee is moving ahead with plans for its demonstration low-cost housing project for welfare families. Construction of the homes, some of which will be built of street widening salvage materials, will aid in coping with the housing shortage in Detroit.

Plans for the 15 houses in the project are complete now. All of the homes must meet the requirements of the building code of the Federal Housing administration. Ten of the residences will be constructed by the Detroit Department of Public Works. The housing committee is seeking bids from private builders for the other five.

The D. P. W. homes are to be built of materials salvaged from street widenings and wrecking operations resulting from condemnation proceedings. Basements will be features of the D. P. W. structures, but private builders will not be required to include them if an "adequate utility room" is provided.

Each of the homes will be of different architectural design. All will be equipped with refrigeration units, gas stoves, laundry tubs, range boilers and coal furnaces. The homes will be insulated and walls will be constructed of brick, brick veneer or fireproof siding. Wallboard or other non-warping material will be used in bathrooms and kitchens.

CONVENE HERE

Officials of North Central Counties to Meet Nov. 18.

Richland county will be host to the Northcentral Ohio Commissioners, Auditors and Engineers association at a meeting Thursday, Nov. 18 at the Fairway near Galion, County Engineer H. C. Sword, secretary of the association, said today.

Charles Duncan, Columbus, secretary of the Ohio Contractors' association, will be the principal speaker at the session which will follow a luncheon at 12:15 p. m.

The association has a membership representing the county offices in seven counties in this section of the state. They are Ashland, Erie, Huron, Lorain, Medina, Richland and Wayne.

TAKES CLUB ON TOUR OF STATE

Movie Shown Rotarians Stresses Importance of Industries.

Motion pictures, with sound accompaniment, introduced novelty into the program at Tuesday's Rotary meeting at the Mansfield-Leland hotel.

Under direction of Harry Gillette, of Cleveland, associated with the Standard Oil company, the film showed a number of Ohio industries in stressing this state's importance in the fields of steel, coal, power and petroleum products.

Pictures of several Ohio parks and recreational spots also were shown in giving an idea of the wide range of entertainment and amusement offered vacationers in the state.

John H. Coleman was chairman of the meeting, at which W. L. Miller, club president, presided.

No One Ever Kissed Her Good Night

Bad breath is death to romance. And bad breath is frequently caused by constipation. Just as headaches, sleeplessness, weakness can be produced by it, or most skin blemishes aggravated by it!

Dr. F. M. Edwards, during his years of practice, treated hundreds of women for constipation and frequently noted that relief sweetened the breath and improved well-being and vitality. For his treatment he used a purely vegetable compound—Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. This laxative is gentle, yet peculiarly effective because it increases the bile flow without shocking the intestinal system.

Help guard against constipation. Use Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. At all druggists, 15¢, 30¢ and 60¢.

"The Greatest Thrill I Ever Had" Says Well-Known Lady

Never Felt So Happy Before as When She Discovered She Was Again Able to Eat Without Suffering from Upset Stomach

All Credit Given World's Tonic

"The greatest thrill of my life came the day I first realized I could enjoy a meal without suffering from gas, sour stomach, palpitation and all the other troubles that had worried me for years," said Mrs. Dorothy Larason, of 250 W. Main St., Newark, Ohio.

"For years I have suffered from bowel trouble and must have been poisoning myself slowly, which showed up in many ways such as sour stomach, gas, pains and acid risings. The gas pressed against my heart, causing palpitation and shortness of breath. Sometimes I thought I had heart trouble. My food often lay heavy in the pit of my stomach and often felt like there was a lump in my throat. Sometimes I'd feel dizzy and see little spots before my eyes and my nerves were all unstrung. When I would stoop over the blood would rush to my head like as if I had high blood pressure.

"It is remarkable how World's Tonic acted so promptly and relieved my constipation; then all the other troubles just seemed to disappear. I now eat foods which I would not have dared touch before, yet never feel any distress afterward. I haven't had a sign of dizziness lately, no headaches and I enjoy sound restful sleep and arise with new strength that amazes me.

"I can safely advise anyone to begin at once taking World's Tonic if they feel like I used to."

Stamp Out the Marijuana Evil!

WITHOUT the knowledge of a large percentage of Mansfield people, trafficking in marijuana cigarets in this city has reached a stage where adults and school children who become addicts to the habit encounter slight difficulty in satisfying their craving for the effects of this dangerous narcotic.

Because Mansfield has thus far escaped the horror of murders and other crimes of violence attributable to the irresistible lust and uncontrollable rage aroused by marijuana, an attitude of lenience has been taken toward offenders responsible for bringing this form of "dope" into the city and educating young people in its use.

Other cities have not been so fortunate and in a number of instances the most atrocious of crimes have traced through to marijuana addicts.

It behooves Mansfield to act sternly in dealing with this matter, in the hope of thus averting the tragedies that are sure to follow in the wake of further infesting of this community with the dope, and consequent development of additional youthful addicts.

Activities of the Mansfield police department, extending through a number of months, in running down sources of this city's marijuana supply and in arresting confessed offenders against narcotic laws, is to be commended and should be regarded as a necessary part of the movement to rid the city of such traffic.

Much is being said about juvenile delinquency in Mansfield, and considerable effort is being expended in attempting to help children pass the age at which minor offenses may lead to later more serious crimes. Little progress can be made toward such a worthy objective unless the fear of severe punishment can be made to curb the continuous and increasing flow of marijuana cigarets into Mansfield—and to stop the sale of this character-destroying dope to our school children and other young people.

More Than One Side.

HERE is a bit of comment on the British labor problem for Americans. It is from Roger Babson, the veteran business statistician, who is abroad studying foreign conditions.

When he first visited England many years ago, Mr. Babson says, labor was "fighting for recognition." It was organizing and striking, and feeling ran high. Eventually there developed a strong labor party. After the war it obtained control of the government. The result was different from what either side had expected.

"The labor party soon learned that in running a nation, there are other factors to consider besides wages and hours. Increased wages and shorter hours sent up costs so much that England could not compete in foreign markets. This resulted in unemployment."

The labor party then recognized, he says, that it had "bitten off more than it could chew." A coalition government was organized, and in a modified form this coalition still governs England.

Knowing the Law.

WORKERS do not get full benefit from laws enacted for their protection because many are ignorant of their own rights. The Consumers League of Ohio, in order to educate the working class in this matter has published a 24-page pamphlet in which federal and state labor laws are condensed and clarified with explanatory notes. It is entitled "Laws Ohio Workers Should Know" and is divided into five sections dealing with child labor, special laws for women workers, social insurance, collective bargaining, and working conditions.

The league is distributing the pamphlets among workers and urges them to report any violations of laws by employers.

It might be a good plan to distribute the pamphlets among employers, too, some of whom may be as ignorant of the laws as the workers themselves.

The public as a whole pays too little attention to most laws that are passed. A few special ones are widely discussed in the newspapers, in conversation and in public forums. More, however, get into the statute books without receiving popular notice.

Digests of the grist of a legislative session would be helpful not only in getting people to obey laws, but in getting them to take an interest in bills before they become laws.

Subtle Censorship.

PRESS censorship in Germany is not a matter of law. An American newspaper man who has just returned from that country reports that no regulative force can be discovered anywhere in the laws or their enforcement. Yet there is censorship.

The government aims at, and achieves, "a co-ordination of the minds and wills of editors and publishers" so that nobody even dreams of printing anything which would be objectionable to the government. Dr. Goebbels, minister of propaganda, puts it neatly. The ideal, he says, is "uniformity of will, multiformity of expression."

The expression has become uniform, too, according to the American observer. Editors and publishers find that it is safer to depend upon only one news source, the official news agency which is a branch of the propaganda ministry. There is no urge to originality in re-telling the news so gathered.

Futhermore, no newspaper article may besmirch the honor of any German in his work, his religious beliefs, or his sense of dignity, unless that German happens to be outside the Nazi party.

Such a press would be neither useful nor interesting to American readers.

Florida's 21½-acre exhibit at the New York fair may bring out some new models in slot machines.

Brazil Abandons Coffee Control As Too Costly

—By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON—Just as congress starts in to agree on a crop control program, along comes news that Brazil has abandoned the crop control program which it has been trying to make effective for the last seven years

Brazil's major crop has been coffee. The Brazilians are the biggest coffee producers in the world. In fact, they produced so much that coffee prices, in world markets, were lower than Brazilian coffee planters liked them. Accordingly they hit on their recently-abandoned scheme to restrict their output. It did boost prices—for a while. But the price boost raised Cain with the foreign demand for Brazilian coffee. That slumped world prices again. Moreover, the experiment proved to be impossibly expensive to the Brazilian government.

Scrapping of the scheme is at least temporarily hard upon the Brabilian coffee industry, but it is not as bad for Brazil in general as it might be, for the republic, of late, has been getting extensively into cotton production and exportation. It has lost about half of its international coffee trade, but it has gained correspondingly in cotton.

As to that, a bit more hereafter.

BRAZIL'S PLAN UNIQUE

Brazil did not try to plow coffee under. It permitted planters to plant and harvest as much as they chose. But the government undertook to pay what it considered a fair price (a pretty high price) for all coffee grown in the country. If foreign quotations fell below the Brazilian government's figure, Brazilian producers naturally sold to their home government, which destroyed that coffee.

This kept the world price up—for a while, as previously remarked.

However, there are other countries, besids Brazil, which potentially are pretty good coffee producers. Noting that Brazilian coffee was becoming increasingly expensive, these other countries began getting into the business, underbidding Brazil a trifle.

Consequently Brazil's coffee exports presently fell off like sixty—about 50 per cent to date.

Meantime the government piled up a $72,000,000 indebtedness, buying condemned coffee. Seventy-two millions sounds picayunish in comparison with our billions, but, for Brazil, it is a lot of money. The government finally reached a point where it could not stand the strain any longer.

Abandonment of the "price pegging" policy is hard on Brazil's coffee planters "per se."

But the worst of it is that their foreign trade is half ruined.

COTTON: BRAZIL VS. U. S.

Well! Cotton?

Cotton is a natural crop in southern Brazil. It used to grow wild in the southern Brazilian states. All it needed was development and attention to make it as good cotton as was available anywhere. But our own Dixie had the world's cotton markets practically pre-empted. It took too much of an effort for Brazilian capital to try to break in, in competition with us.

That is, it did until our cotton plowings-under began to make it an inducement to try it.

We hoisted our price, all right.

We hoisted it high enough to start foreign competition on the rampage—and have cut our cotton exports in two by virtue of having done so And our cotton exports were more than half of our cotton production.

Maybe the same thing will turn out to be true of our wheat, corn and other agricultural products—if we stick to the same policy.

IN THE MINORITY

Soil conservation is rational, of course.

But as to crop restrictions?—compulsory or otherwise?

"Let nature take its course," is the motto of some of our legislators from farm states.

I think, however, that they are in a minority.

Listen, World!

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

Why I Named It "Listen World!"

YOU'VE asked me, more times than I can remember, why I named this column "Listen, World!" And I didn't answer . . .

I didn't answer, because it was one of those things one doesn't tell easily, if at all . . . a thing that lay outside the writing world, in a darkness which I didn't want to re-enter.

But lately I've seen so many floundering in that same darkness, reaching so pitifully for help, that I've come to feel that I have no right to withhold anything which may possibly help or hearten those who are trapped as I was once. And so—here's why I called this column "Listen, World!"

But first you'll have to go back and back, thirty years, to a New Year's eve with the snow flakes blurring against the window pane—and a tall, gawky girl, standing at the window, staring out into the driven darkness.

Behind her in the room a few people chatted quietly, waiting for the midnight hour. Prim people, precise room—no obvious villainy. But to that desperate girl, the whole scene was as intolerably cruel as a medieval inquisition chamber For that was 1907—and I was a Californian. And between Puritan Vermont, in 1907, and Wild West California, yawned abysses as deep and impassable as the grave itself.

Staring into the darkness that night, the grave seemed preferable. Four years since, I'd come as a bride to these grim mortals, for whom love and laughter were tainted with sin. Four years since, I'd known the happiness and gypsy adventure of my frontier home. Endless days of unbroken loneliness, joyless drudgery . . . constant suspicion and increasing dislike by people who regarded any outlander as little better than a savage And now, at 23, where did I stand?

Friendless. Penniless. Sickly. Lacking either education or pull. My only possession . . . my tiny, frail baby boy, whom I so madly loved—but whom the law would so certainly take from me if I left his father.

Today that plight might not seem so hopeless Today women work—are educated—have privileges and power. But what was Puritan Vermont, and Victorian America, where "nice women" still had little higher rate or rating than the family cow.

Only 23—an eternity yet to live! But how? Nail bit into palm, tooth into lip, as I tried to keep back the insane scream that seemed swelling . . . swelling—oh, I couldn't. I wouldn't endure it! There must be some way out! I'd find it, somehow . . . laugh again, live again . . . make a break for myself and little son!

B-O-N-G! . . . B-O-N-G! . . . The old clock was ushering in another year. Behind me rose a slight rustling . . . a discreet murmur of salutations.

But I did not hear them. I had flung up the window . . . I was reaching out . . . and across the darkness, above the storm, against all obstacles that Fate might ever set, I was screaming . . . screaming . . . "LISTEN! LISTEN, WORLD: I'M NOT LICKED YET!"

NO, IT DIDN'T happen the next day. Nor the next. There were years to go . . . battles to be fought . . . heartbreaks to be borne. And hardest of all to take . . . except that slender grave . . . was the handicap of my own ignorance and folly.

But the cry I had given that night was never to be silenced. At my blackest hour, something had spoken in me (was it the Voice that made me?) and I knew, beyond all forgetting, that nothing on earth can stop the human spirit if it once decides to go. It may not always follow the path it chose . . . nor reach the goal it desired . . . nor pay the price it expected . . . BUT IF IT ONCE DECIDES TO TRAVEL, NOTHING BUT ITS OWN LAZINESS OR FEAR CAN PREVENT IT.

It was 1907 when I shouted into that storm . . . and 1919 before the final answer came . . . the chance to write a column. But the years dropped away when they asked me what I would name it. What name, but one, could there be for a column that would speak to the hurt and the hopeless?

"LISTEN, WORLD . . . I'M NOT LICKED YET!"

DAILY BIBLE THOUGHT

HEAR, YE NATIONS: Therefore wait ye upon me, saith the Lord, until the day that I rise up to the prey, for by determination is to gather the nations that I may assemble the kingdoms, to pour upon them my indignation, even all my fierce anger: for all the earth shall be devoured with the fire of my jealousy. For then will I turn to the people a pure language, that they may all call upon the name of the Lord, to serve him with one consent.—Zephaniah 3:8, 9.

Keeping Step

—By LESLIE EICHEL—

Duke Leads Bewildered Existence.

AMERICANS do not understand the Duke of Windsor. It is also true that he does not understand Americans.

The duke has been a sheltered man all his life. He was born into the leisurely thinking Victorian age. That is a past world. The duke has been all around the earth, he has seen much (from the surface), but his world never has changed.

Nor has he grown up. Against the political leaders of the age, he is a child. Against the social forces of the time, he is chaff tossed on the winds.

He could not understand why his selection of a "speedup" industrial engineer as a guide should antagonize American workers or cause his purported study of labor conditions to seem a mockery. He still does not understand. His statement in Paris announcing the postponement of his trip to the United States continued the blunder instead of ameliorating it. The duke, in it, thanked American industrial leaders for their offers of assistance but mentioned not a word to the millions of workers whose conditions he was to examine.

Furthermore, in that statement, the duke was referred to as "His Royal Highness"—although the statement obviously was issued by himself to the people of a nation who jealously insist they are a democracy.

WORSE—NO BETTER.

The duke will find life increasingly bitter. He is unprepared to exist as a private citizen—or even as a lesser royalty. He will consider himself abused wherever he goes, whatever he does. He was reared as a person apart, as royalty, untouched even by the people of his own land.

He will be increasingly bewildered over the failure of the world to accept him as he is. He will consider the world, not himself, as out of step.

His evident bewilderment over the outcries of American workers against Bedaux, the "guide," and even himself, must have struck with terrific impact. Could it be possible that democratic America doubted him? Could it be possible that labor was turning against a professed friend? Was it possible, could it be possible, that the sentiment of labor could influence a government that usually held out open arms to everybody, including the most insignificant Englishman? And—one can picture the perspiration welling on the forehead of the duke—was it the duke himself, not American workers, who would be made the subject of a "study," if he came to the United States?

One does not know the inner thoughts of another man, but could these not have been the thoughts of the duke—and logically?

But it is not only America which will "seem out of joint." It will be everywhere.

If the duke is to survive without madness, he will have to make himself over from something within himself.

IF IT WERE ONLY LABOR—

The duke probably has an honest desire to apply himself to something. He cannot idle away much more of his life. He would die of boredom. He probably does desire inherently to see decent conditions for workers and better housing. But mere inspection trips, between gallivantings, and with "speedup" men as guides will not aid either him or workers or employers.

In fact, the bewilderment of the duke over American workers comes chiefly because in England he has been opposed (and overwhelmed) not by the workers (who still have a god-like faith in royalty in England), but by industrialists.

The British industrialists and their controlled Tory government have been the chief elements, next to the duke's own ineptness, in putting Edward out of the way.

And, in America, the duke may learn later, the industrialists gave a greater sigh of relief than did the workers when he announced his trip was postponed. A man who has not grown up, wandering around this hard, hard world as if it were an Alice-in-Wonderland fairyland could do more "damage" than all the agitative propaganda that could be poured into a nation For it not only is a hard, hard world, full of contesting forces, but a highly explosive one. And the duke doesn't even know it has changed, or that it is charged with dynamite.

A WISH?

Even so, some day after he has been buffeted around for years and has learned some of the bitter truths that less favored men learn early in life, he may slip quietly into the United States—and be cheered, not bewildered, by those very much alive forces, which meet savage facts headon in order that conditions actually may be bettered.

The duke must learn that betterment comes not from above but from the inner, torn soul, from the deep-born thunders and the vivid lightning flashes. Nature recognizes no royalty. If ever the duke will understand that, he will understand that his own life does not count, nor his visits, nor his "studies." At best he can become merely one of the millions of strugglers—and, who knows, then he may find himself and be of some real benefit to his fellow men?

But, alas, we fear we are idealizing. His life probably will continue to be a series of shocks, bewilderments and sorrows. And the sesame that would permit him to re-enter Wonderland—to escape from the harsh outside—probably has been lost forever.

Timely Editorial

Mountainous Debt.

The undersecretary of the treasury Roswell Magill, told the National Tax association in Baltimore a few days ago that "the net outstanding debt of the United States was 35 billion dollars" on July 1, 1937. The gross debt, of course, is now more than 37 billion. But on the debt as given by Mr. Magill the annual intereset charge is 915 million dollars.

At the same time the state and local debt, according to the latest figures, is found to be 17 billion dollars, with an annual interest charge of 718 million dollars. Here is a total load of public debt amounting to 54 billion dollars, or 52 billion, whichever way one choose to figure it. The difference is slight anyway. But on top of that is the total yearly interest burden of 1,633 million dollars.

There are no concrete terms by which the human mind adequately can conceive of the magnitude of this financial burden. That accounts in part for the public indifference that has allowed it to accumulate. But for a generation or longer the load will be carried on the backs of the people and it will be a continuous drain upon the fruits of their labor and their resources.—Kansas City Times.

How It Started

—By JEAN NEWTON

"As Faithful as Penelope."

Faithfulness, which, like virtue, is in the mind, has been apotheosized and immortalized in this phrase which is rooted in ancient legend.

According to the story, during the two decades that Ulysses was away from home, suitors importuned his beautiful wife, Penelope, for her hand—in vain.

At the end, Penelope, who had been subjected to considerable political pressure abroad as well as by her own subjects, announced to to all who sought her that she would make a choice after she had completed weaving a funeral mantle for her father-in-law, Laertes.

Encouraged, the suitors anxiously waited—unaware that Penelope unravelled at night what she wove by day.

After twenty years, Ulysses returned to find his wife still faithful in thought as well as in deed.

Instead of feeling cheerful and grateful toward those who, in his absence, had showered his wife with attentions, he slew every single one of them.

2. Rhode Island has a population density of approximately 550 persons per square mile

3. Approximately once every 27 days.

Courtesy Big Factor In Holding Business

WHO'S THE most important person in your company? President? Sales manager? Personnel manager? No, on all three, according to John R. Tunis, well known American author.

The most important person in every outfit, he writes in the current Rotarian Magazine, is the man or girl who has customer contact.

"If you have contact with the public by letter, telephone, wire, or word of mouth," he urges, "you represent your company. If you happen to be the first person to reach the public, you are the most important cog in the organization From you the stranger gets his impression of the company, an impression that stays in mind forever. Two minutes have secured lifelong customers, and they have made lifelong enemies.

"What sort of person do you care to do business with, the man who growls into the telephone, or the pleasant voice which responds, 'Good morning, this is the Riverside Hotel'?

"Courtesy not only gets business it holds business," continues Mr. Tunis. "Ten years of sound business dealings have been spoiled by ten seconds of discourtesy. A corporation executive checked and discovered that his company was spending over half a million dollars each year to get new business, but almost nothing outside regular channels to hold the business it had. He decided to spend $5,000 on an adjuster, a man who spent his whole time on clients and former clients, ironing out disputes, seeking causes of loss of business, and finding out whether the company's service was satisfactory. In one year the number of customers dropping from this concern's books declined 62 per cent.

"What a difference it would make if all corporations acted on a policy of courtesy. What a difference if the honest businessmen of the nation paid as much attention to courtesy as the gyps, crooks, fly-by-night promoters, and scalawags who have only one stock in trade—a courteous address and manner What a difference if business became polite and stayed polite not only to the public but to itself In short, what a difference if we all took the curt out of courtesy."

McIntyre's New York Day by Day

ELMER DAVIS is one of the versatile litterateurs who came out of the same Indiana town—Aurora—that was also the birth-place of Edwin C. Hill. Davis is a Rhodes scholar, but one of those who never mentions it and has no truck with the pseudoliterati.

O. O. McIntyre

He was for a time a leading editorial writer on the New York Times and the youngest ever to contribute to that ponderous potpourri. He was also a voyager on the famous Henry Ford peace ship during the war and wrote some of the most interesting pieces about that jaunt.

About 18 years ago, Davis decided to cut loose from all salaried jobs and write as he pleased, when he pleased. And he has become one of the successful free lances, having contributed to almost every magazine of prominence in both the United States and England.

He is also the author of a dozen books, ranging from the biographical to mystery and light fantasy. Recently he has been a topical events commentator on the radio. He lives on Morningside Heights and that section is the locale of many of his stories and essays.

Henry Luce, publisher of the successful Time and Fortune, is said to be spending $5,000,000 to put Life in the same bracket. His picturizing idea got away to a flying start and the problem became one of holding down circulation until advertising caught up. He is a maverick of the publishing field, each one of his magazines being hooted as impractical at the kickoff. Luce was born in China, his father being a missionary. He was graduated from Yale and began his quixotic publishing adventure with a classmate, who died. His wife is the lovely Claire Boothe, author of the top hit play "The Woman." She is reputed to be giving her royalties to worthy charities.

The latest of the publishing ventures has been Erskine Gwynne's revival of his Paris Boulevardier, which, unlike the weekly New Yorker, appears monthly. Gwynne, a blue blood relative of the Vanderbilts, had a sizable list of luxury advertisers for a start He has spent most of his time since the war in Paris, where he was born and was a rousing spirit in the American crowd that circulated about Place Vendome. His mother still lives there. He had a twin brother with whom he fought side by side in the World war and who was killed in an air battle. Gwynne, a silken voiced young man, blonde and with a cherubic face and seraphic smile, has fooled many in rough and tumble scraps in his playboy days. Several of those worsted mistook him for a fop.

Oddly, there has never been a strictly Broadway magazine to prosper, although there have been numerous gallant efforts. Among the first was Broadway Buzz, a frothy sophisticated but impersonal collection of gossip, sponsored and edited by the late Eustace Hale Ball. It died aborning. Leander Richardson, talented writer, and W. A. Brady, press agent, also fathered one that got no farther than the "dummy" for the first issue. Richard Harding Davis had a hand in one that also died ingloriously. Then there was the infamous Broadway Brevities, which got away to a fairly good start and really cut the pattern for the type of gossip column that endures today. But its editor got tangled in some sly blackmail attempts and the magazine suspended while he went to Atlanta to reflect. Broadway, from a publishing standpoint, does not react as a geographical unit. It craves publicity more than any other section, but it likes to be a part of the general survey. Too, there is so little left of the actual Broadway that it could not support a magazine.

In one of my early reaches for the next rung in New York I was articled to a brochure called "The Key to New York." It was to be a give-away on hotel desks and railroad terminals. My job was to write a column of information and to solicit advertising. For six weeks, before the proposed launching, I "contacted the advertising prospects" and hold what is probably the world's record in complete floppery. In no instance did I ever get beyond an office boy. The brave little feuilleton never passed the prospectus stage. As I was on a commission basis, my six week's soliciting totaled zero, to say nothing of car fare. And there was a Marie Dressler "Old Min" type of boarding house landlady up in West 72nd street who was waiting in the hall every night for my arrival. Boo!

SCIENCE GIVES RAINBOW HUES TO GARDENIAS

Successful Tests Made at Ohio State With Dyes and New Inks.

COLUMBUS —(U.P.)— What is believed to be the first successful attempt to color gardenias artificially has been announced by Charles Bancroft, Ohio State university graduate student in floriculture.

Through the use of aniline dyes and various commercial inks, Bancroft has produced gardenias of yellow, emerald green, purple and red. The cut flowers are simply placed in a jar containing the coloring and within an hour the hues begin to show in the petals. Within 12 hours the flowers absorb their maximum of coloring

Bancroft, who came to Ohio State about a year ago from McGill university, Montreal, on a fellowship, hit upon coloring by accident.

He was conducting experiments to determine the best way to preserve cut flowers. One night he left some gardenias in a colored liquid and the following day he found the flowers had absorbed the color.

Blue Ink Not a Success.

Sensing the process's possibilities, Bancroft began using various types of coloring matter. He found that certain commercial inks were readily absorbed while others were of no use, presumably because the particles in suspension were too large to make their way through the plants' cells. He found practically all brands of blue ink were unsatisfactory.

Bancroft also tried his experiments on easter lilies, hunnemanias—often miscalled "California poppies," which they closely resemble—and chrysanthemums, with generally good success

He also tried sherry wine as a coloring agent, but found the alcohol was a little too much for the flowers, producing a definite toxic effect.

Bancroft's early experiments were conducted on dahlias, but it was found the coloring came out "streaky" because the veins in the petals were too far apart.

Bancroft said he could not understand why it had not been discovered before that gardenias, which are normally white, could be colored. In the course of his experiments, Bancroft has exploded several popular notions about flowers He said his experiments showed there was no foundation for the belief that aspirin added to flower water has a beneficial effect.

Explodes Theories.

"In fact, it proves injurious to some flowers and doesn't seem to help any," he said

He also said that placing cut flowers in a copper container with water does not appear to preserve the blossoms

Bancroft also found that flowers only need about one inch of water unless they are dried out. Then they should be placed in deep water for about an hour, he said.

Another experiment showed that flowers with long stems keep just as well as those with short stem.

Deliberately wilting flowers before placing them in water does not preserve them, Bancroft found.

And if a young woman wants to keep a corsage fresh, he said, she should sprinkle it with water and wrap it in tissue paper and place it in the ice box.

A "by-product" of Bancroft's coloring experiments was the discovery that green dye seems to preserve flowers longer than other hues.

AIRLINERS GIVEN 'OVERCOAT' AS PROTECTION AGAINST ICE

CHEYENNE, Wyo.— (INS) — Airplanes in trans-continental service were being temporarily grounded here today for the installation of "winter overcoats" to protect their wings and propellers from icing conditions

All United Air Lines' mainliners, from the giant 21-passenger Douglases to the 3-mile-a-minute Boeings, were taken out of service for a few hours when they landed on scheduled flights at the airport maintenance base here Passengers continued their travels in other planes.

It was pointed out that rubber "boots" and "slinger-rings" of a larger and newer type with better mechanical features, are installed in a short time. The "boots" are attached to the leading edges of the wings (where ice buildings up in flight and seriously threatens the plane's safety) and by the pulsating action of air tubes underneath the rubber cover, crack any ice that may form so that it is blown away by the slip-stream

The "slinger-rings" fit over the propeller hubs protecting the blades and hub from ice formation.

Only certain atmospheric conditions (temperature relative to humidity) causes ice conditions at cruising altitude for the modern mainliners but the meteorologists of the line have devised a new method of forecasting weather conditions along U. A. L.'s routes so that the captains of each liner dispatched on a flight will know exactly what ice conditions to expect.

"In the addition to the mechanical method of protecting equipment," R W Schroeder, United's manager of operations, said, "more accurate methods of forecasting flight areas in which ice-forming conditions prevail are available"

Project Aims at Reducing Adult Illiteracy One-Tenth.

Twenty-two Richland county citizens enrolled in WPA education classes are helping the WPA to achieve its goal of reducing adult illiteracy in Ohio by one-tenth, Mrs Anne Wilson, Mt. Gilead, supervisor of the education program here, said today.

Unemployed teachers, given positions by WPA, have taught the fundamentals of reading writing and arithmetic to more than 20,000 adult Ohioans in the past four years and will instruct an additional 9,000 during the current year.

Literacy work is only one feature of the educational program carried on by WPA in Richland county, Mrs Wilson pointed out. In all there are 18 WPA classes with 125 pupils.

THE STATE vs. ELNA JEPSON

By NANCY BARR MAVITY

(Copyright 1937)

CHAPTER XI

"Why not come out with it?" She almost spoke the words aloud. She handed him his cup of coffee with a steady hand. This man, after all, although she had learned to rely on the quality of his judgment, was only a business acquaintance adviser. Nevertheless, her first remark to the man brooding over the fire was a personal one.

"Did you notice my new frock? The first I've had since—ever so long."

Roger's keen eyes surveyed her carefully, rather as if she were a witness whom he was about to cross-examine.

"No, I didn't," he said, and suddenly relaxed into laughter. "I never notice what anybody wears. It's a handicap in my profession. But now that my attention has been called to it, it's very pretty.

"Pretty—I hope you choose your adjectives more aptly than that when you talk to a jury!" The familiar ironic smile hovered on Elna's lips and then dissolved in a cascade of responsive laughter "It was awfully like you, I think, to pull all my chestnuts out of the fire—because that's your business—and then not even to know that this is the first new dress I've had since Father died, because that's not your business. You and he are rather alike, I think." She had thought it so often. At last it was said.

Roger held out his coffee cup, and Elna refilled it. It was hot, but he gulped it down before he spoke.

For the first time Roger fumbled for words. "That was a great compliment—and undeserved," he said, looping his hands between his knees in the way he had. Then he was on his feet.

"What is your personal opinion of—Mrs. Ainsworth?" There was a perceptible pause before the name.

"I don't know why you wish my opinion," Elna began, "but since you have asked for it, Mrs. Ainsworth and I have nothing in common. I do not care to meet her again." She had meant to stop there. That was the thing to say, dignified and quiet. She was utterly unprepared for the white flame of anger that swept over her.

"I don't know why you wanted me to go!" Her fists were clenched on the table top, half supporting her as she leaned forward. "She's a hellcat, she's dishonest, she's mean! And she succeeded, as she planned, in making a fool of me. I don't know why, except out of sheer cussedness. That, Mr. Ainsworth, is my opinion of Mrs Ainsworth. And if I'm talking like a fishwife, I'm afraid I shan't apologize."

As quickly as it had risen, the flame was quenched within her. Roger was leaning back now in his chair.

"I wanted to get an unbiased opinion. Rather difficult," he said.

"No one can be made a fool of who isn't a fool, and I was it," she answered. To her own surprise, she felt quite serene again. Perhaps for the first time in her life she wanted to express a thought of her own, undictated by memories—even the memory of Oscar Jepson's often-repeated, "Never explain, never apologize." She fumbled for words, lighting another cigaret with excessive care.

"I am grateful for all your assistance," she said. "Gratitude is a complication. I did what you asked because of it."

"I didn't want gratitude!" Roger's face, with the trick of firelight playing over it, had the angles and the steinness of features clipped out of granite "I only wanted you to see for yourself—can't you understand that?"

"No." Then unexpectedly, she heard herself adding another monosyllable "Why?"

"That's what I've been waiting for—wanting to tell you in a way that would convince you." Roger was leaning forward now, tense. "It's like this," he said, ticking off the points on his fingers as if the subject were entirely impersonal "I couldn't say anything so banal as that my wife doesn't understand me You'd have laughed, and rightly. So I wanted you to see for yourself O K so far?"

"I'm not afraid of being banal I'll say, 'Go on, you interest me, strangely' Isn't that the cue?" Hands clenched under the table Elna managed the light note again

"It's like this," Roger repeated "I admired your father because he kept something inside of him always—intact."

"That is true." Elna nodded "I always thought of that word for him—I didn't know any one else had."

"You are like him—you make no claims and want none You can be casual instead of intense Maybe you're too young to know that this is a great gift a gift of peace."

Elna's brows drew together "I'm not very used to being a museum specimen," she said.

* * *

Rober clapped his hands as in applause. "That's what I like about you—your saltiness," he said, and added tardily, "plus your brains."

"My brains, if any, are within my own head, and inaccessible. Very poor, probably. Was there anything you wanted?"

"Yes!" The word was an explosion in the quiet room "I'm about at the end of my rope. I want your help."

"I'll listen." She bit her tongue to keep from adding, "Don't be melodramatic." Behind his efficiency was something else — something she sought yet dreaded. "Naturally I will do anything you wish, if I can," she added "What is it?"

Roger knocked his ashes into the tray with a careful gesture. "You have met Holly," he began. "You made your own judgment about her That gives me the right to tell you a bit more At least, I think so No place in my alleged home is my own."

* * *

Elna could not resist a smile at the "alleged," but she waved her hand as a friendly signal for him to continue.

Roger said, staring into the fire, "To say that she is jealous is mild. She is possessive, yet she hates me"

"Then why don't you leave her—get a divorce, if that is what you want?" This, Elna was sure, was what her father would have said, weighing issues without emotion.

"I have no legal grounds for a divorce. They are not so easy as you think" Roger's voice was cool and steady.

"And so?" she said. After she had said it, she found herself holding her breath. What will he ask me? And what will I answer?

"All I want is for you to know". Roger flung his cigarette into the fireplace "This place is peace You are peace Both of us are lonely. Do you mind if I come here—often—just to see you?" His slim dark fingers gestured toward his brief case. "It would be lovely to know some one who made no claims. I know that your freedom is precious to you—so I ask nothing else"

"Give me a moment" Elna's lips felt almost too stiff to articulate. Thoughts whirled, almost too rapidly to be caught by consciousness She loved Roger—and all he wanted or asked was this little cup of cold water But if that was what he wanted, that was what she must give. Oscar Jepson would have despised this welter of emotion—but Oscar Jepson's wife had killed herself. Casual? No claims? Freedom? The words rang in her ears.

"Very well," she said, rising and extending her hand.

Never in her life had she looked more completely Oscar Jepson's daughter "It's the difficult things that are worth doing," he had said.

Roger was sprawled on the chaise-lounge when Elna entered. A hot toddy on the small coffee table beside him caught topaz glints from the firelight

It had been a long, heavy day at the laboratory She had worked an hour overtime and her shoulders drooped with fatigue. But they straightened as she flung her hat on a chair and almost danced forward

"Why, Roger! What an unexpected pleasure!" she exclaimed mockingly. "I didn't know you were coming, and I'm the appointed fire starter"

"Have a drink," he said "The kettle's boiling in the kitchen and the makings are already mixed"

"But I don't drink, you know," Elna answered in surprise.

"Neither are you a slave to schedule. One hot toddy never ruined anybody. Besides you look as if you need it."

Elna snuggled into an armchair and let the warmth of the unaccustomed liquor sooth her nerves.

"About schedules," Roger mused, tilting his glass against the light and draining the final drop, "one of the nicest things about all this is that I have never made a date with you except on office business, in my life. That's the reason for this early descent on your place. Mrs. Ainsworth wants an exact account of every hour, and calls the office to know just when I will be home The bonds became a bit too tight today, so I gave myself the treat of merely saying that I had no idea."

"I can see that," Elna answered. She could understand the inner revolt of a strong, clear mind against nagging, shallow jealousy and incessant demands. "It was nice of you to start the fire," she added.

Roger set his glass down with a decisive bump. "Both of us are lonely," he said "Can't we comfort each other, without making any trouble? Can't we be gay and casual about it?"

* * *

Casual. The word smote Elna like a blow. For six months Roger had possessed a duplicate key to her apartment. For six months she had hurried home on the off chance that he might come to share her dinner or her coffee Strange as their friendship had been, she had respected it. It had set her apart and alone, but it had been worth it.

"Casual?" she repeated. Thank heaven her cigarette holder was steady. This was the moment to hold or lose.

"You are free," Roger said in his level voice. "Aren't we being rather foolish to go on like this? I like you, Elna"

"I like you too." Elna's eyes closed for a moment. Roger deserved the truth. She would have to tell it to him

"Casual?" she said again "I'm not that. I'm not that. I'm an awful romantic. I care about loyalty. Can you stand that?"

"I can stand anything from you, my dear." All was suddenly smooth in the room.

"As to Holly," he added after a pause. "I knew within a year that our marriage was a mistake. But I cannot as they say, allow my home to be broken. For one thing, it would not be a good thing for an attorney with my class of practice to be involved in the divorce court For another thing, Holly has no way of making her own living, as you have. She'd probably whack me for more alimony than I could stand."

Elna nodded dumbly. Roger, as always, was strong and sure. She felt herself suddenly weak in the presence of that clear will.

"If any one else turns up, of course I shall fade out of the picture," Roger said.

Elna's brows drew together in their characteristic line. Roger was right and clear, while she was in turmoil He had not even said that he loved her, except by implication.

"Would you marry me, if you could?" She too must be right and clear.

"Indeed I would, my dear, but I can't. That's why I have to make this explanation. We'll be two independent persons, but at least we can make each other happy, can't we?"

Elna dared not look at Roger's face. I'm an awful person, she thought vaguely. I told Curtis I didn't want to be taken care of. If Roger had offered to take care of me, instead of talking so much about independence and being so reasonable—

Then, in a searing flash, she knew what she must do. She must live up to Roger to his opinion of her. He thought he wanted her on her own terms, but he didn't really. Beneath all that, he wanted her to be the gay, casual, self-determined person he thought her. Her voice, when she spoke at last, was perfectly under control.

"I do like having you here—knowing that you like to come," she said. "I hope you'll keep on coming. You've laid everything before me fairly". She could face his dark, searching eyes squarely now, turning her chair a bit toward him and sitting very erect. "But if things between us were—different I think they'd be spoiled. Let's keep them just as they are, a secret world that's different from other people's worlds."

Almost she regretted her words. Why couldn't she have taken what she wanted, even though it could not have been very much? Certainly no thought of Holly restrained her. She was only too glad to give Roger some respite from Holly

HALT THAT COLD!

Put the Brakes on It Fast With This Four-Way Treatment!

No cold can be given an inch! The more rope you give a cold, the more you do to hang yourself!

No cold is a "light" cold No cold can be ignored or neglected. The cold that is pooh-poohed today is the cold that takes a serious turn tomorrow.

Deal with a cold in a business-like manner. Treat it for what it is —an internal infection! Treat it with a cold medicine not a cure-all.

The Treatment That Answers!

Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine (LBQ tablets) are what you want for a cold!

They are expressly a cold treatment, and not a "cure-all."

They are internal medication.

Bromo Quinine tablets do four important things in the treatment of colds.

First, they open the bowels.

Second, they check the infection in the system.

Third, they relieve the headache and fever.

Fourth, they tone the system and help fortify against further attack.

Grove's Bromo Quinine tablets are nothing new or untried. They have been in use over 40 years and are the largest-selling cold tablet in the world.

That, in itself, is enough to assure you of their efficacy and dependability.

Bromo Quinine tablets now come sugar-coated as well as plain. Both kinds are sold by all druggists, a few cents a box.

Play Safe!

The moment you feel a cold coming on, do the wise thing. Go right to your druggist for a box of Bromo Quinine tablets. Start taking the tablets immediately and you'll usually break up the cold in 24 hours. That's the speed of action you want.

Ask your druggist for Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine (LBQ tablets) and insist upon getting what you ask for. It's your money you're spending!

CORNS

These soothing, healing pads instantly relieve pain; stop shoe pressure, safely remove corns. Cost but a trifle. Sold everywhere
